A CONFIRMATION AND DISCOVERY OF WITCHCRAFT

by JOHN STEARNE

Published by The Rota at the University of Exeter 1973

ACT 16704 211

Printed in Great Britain by The Scolar Press Limited Menston, Yorkshire, England

Bibliographical Note

A confirmation and discovery of witchcraft is the sole publication of John Stearne (or Sterne), close associate of Witch-Finder General Matthew Hopkins in an intense campaign in East Anglia between 1645 and 1647. Hopkins published his own The discovery of witches (Wing, Short title catalogue, H2571) in Norwich in May 1647 as a reply to criticisms of John Gaule, Select cases of conscience touching witches and witchcraft (Wing, G379, June 1646), but was dead before Stearne's contribution to the controversy came out in 1648. (According to legend and the D.N.B. Hopkins was himself 'swome' as a witch and hanged, but Stearne states that he died 'peacably after a long sickness of consumption'.) A confirmation, inter alia, defends witchfinders against charges of hypocrisy and chicanery. Hopkins and Stearne were certainly professionals not indifferent to profit and notoriety, but seem also to have been assured of performing a public service. For Stearne, who has been labelled a puritan, it may have been a spiritual duty. A confirmation pays close attention to biblical texts. Recent commentators have established that existing fears of witchcraft were being exploited rather than created and that the mission of discovery, with its numerous victims, was a popular one. Testimony was freely and copiously given by neighbours. Indeed, Gaule complained that men spoke more of 'the infallible and wonderful power of the witch-finders than . . . of God, Christ or the gospel preached'.

A confirmation offers valuable clues, direct and indirect, to the motives not only of witch-accusers but of those who 'became' witches themselves and suggests why women in particular might be ready to make a pact with the Devil. The pamphlet has been extensively used by C. L'Estrange Ewen in his Witch hunting and witch trials (1929, reissued 1971) and Witchcraft and demonianism (1933, reissued 1970), by A. MacFarlane in Witchcraft in Tudor and Stuart England (1970) and in K. V. Thomas's comprehen sive Religion and the decline of magic (1971). The last two discuss the activities of 'white witches' whose existence Stearne denies.

John Stearne survived the Restoration and in the 1660s apparently was living once again in Manningtree, Essex, a centre of his earlier witchfinding activitics (Ewen, Witchcraft and demonianism, p. 261).

George Thomason seems to have missed A confirmation. The British Museum copy (Shelf mark C. 54.e.6.) from which this edition—the first since 1648—is reproduced (with the permission of the Trustees) was acquired in the nineteenth century. Wing S5364 wrongly assigns it to 1645. There is in fact only one version (Wing S5365).

A Confirmation is reproduced by permission of the Trustees of the British Museum.

defire to be further fatisfied concerning the diabolicall art, or crying (in, of Witch-craft (1s 1 may (o call it;) For the finne of Witch-craft, and the diabolical practife thereof, is omnium scelerum atrocifimum, and in such as have the knowledge of God, the greatest Apoltacie from the faith ; for they renounce God and Chrift, and give them (elves by a covenant to the Devill, the atter enemy to God and all mankind, for in Deut. 18.10, 11, 12.God gave command to all the children of Israel that none among ft his (hould bee such. For those abominations were the children of Canaan driven out from before them, and utterly. destroyed and plagued. As alfo Manafieth, 2 Cron. 33.6. which wickednesse of his was so abhorred of God, as in his difpleasure hee mentions it many yeares after by leremy, as cause of removing the Iewes from their land, and so leading them amay captive into a strange land, Ier. 15. 4, 5. Idolaters ought to dye, as in Exod. 22.20. and 32. 28, 29. Nay inticers to Idolatrie, Deut. 13.9. becaufe they worship Devills, Pfal. 106.37. 1 Cor. 1C. 20. Revel. 9. 20. But Witches worship Devills, they invncate them, crave helpe of them, worke by them, and doe them homage, facrifice to them, and they do it not to flockes and flones, and fo mediately to the Devil. as other Idolaters doc, but immediately to the Devill himselfe, and therefore the greatest Idolaters that can bezand A 2 are are not they then more worthy of death? And to convince others who are of such an erroneus opinion as to fay, notwith standing God's law against them, and the holy Scripture speaking of them, befides the lawes of Nations, both heathen and Chrian made to punifs them, that there are no witches, but that there are many poore filly ignorant people hanged wrong fully, and that those who have gone or beene in struments in finding out or discovering those of late made knowne have done it for there owne private ends, for gaine and such like, favouring fome where they thought good, and unjustly profecuting others; Itherefore (as my leasure hath permitted me) have given my felfe to the reading of some approved relations touching the arraignement and condemnation of Witches; As also treatifes of learned men concerning the devilish art of Witch-craft; adding withall fome few things which otherwife I have learned and observed since the 25.0f March 1645 as being in part an agent in finding out or discovering some of those fince that time, being about two hundred in number, in Effex, Suffolke, Northamptonshire, Huntingtonshire, Bedfordthire, Norfolke, Cambridgeshire, and the Isle of Ely in the County of Cambridge, befides other places, justly and defervedly executed upon their legall tryalls. Now the occasion being thus offered, and Master Hopkins dead; I destre to give some fatisfaction to the world, that it may appeare, what hath beene done, hath beene for the good of the commen wealth, and we free from those aspersions cast upon us, and that I never favored any, or unjustly prosecuted others, but that all that be guilty of this, on ght to die; a fwell the g od or white witches fo called, as the other: and that there is, and bath beene more favour flewed, or at least leffe care taken for the differency of fuch as be guilty, then by the word of Gad there ought. For how many are there now a daies which could be contented to paffe by many of them, as Magicians, Negromancers and fuch like? of whom his late Majefty of famous renowne renorme in his Demonologie givesh a Greadfull cenjure, who faith they are to be dealt with all, as with Socerers, and e-(pecially the curing witch, commonly called the good witch. Nay thefe rather get credit and oftimation love and liking, as did the Magicians and Sorcerers with Pharaok, Exod. 7.8. with Nabuchadnezer and Belfhazzar, Ifa. 47. 12. Erck. 22. As did alfo Simon Magus with the Samaritans, who was held to be the great power of God, Acts8. Likewife Elimas with Sergius Paulus, Acts 13. And the Pythonelle with her Ma-Ger, Acts 16. And will not many fay, furely they worke by God, because they use good prayers and good words, and often name God? but let those remember that the Devill himselfe canufe good words, Mar. 1. 24. and 5. 7. Acts 17. that bee can counterfeit the habit and words of an holy man, Samuel. 1 Sam. 28.13, 15, 17. that hee can turne himselfe into an Angell of light, 2 Cor. 11. Therefore hee not teach his fervants to feigne holineffe and yet be thefe in many respects worse then the others, and the holy Scripture exempts none, but utterly forbids any going to them, or asking counsell of them. I hope this my labour will excuse mee, and give some better satisfaction to those who are not yet fully satisfied herein, for that I shall make it plainely appeare, that I neither formerly, in any of my proceedings concerning this matter, or in penning of this ayme at mine owne private ends rather then the publique good, for that I shall discover, so far forth as I am able, or at least, as civility and modestic shall give way; yet I am not ignorant how dangerous it is for me to put my lefte to farre forth into the Scaof common opinion, and I cannot fee that by reason of the flelves and rocks of injurious conceits which are ready to be found on every hand I am like to passe any adv nture; having had experience already how forward many bee in taking part with many of these who have been detected to promote them forward to take the leaft advantage by fuit of law, thereby to aquitt them felves, when as many times it bath fallen out otherwife, and been a meanes meanes to bring to their deferved punifhment, but let such remember, the Devill needs no provoker. And though Balack sent to Balaam to pursue the people, yet we find the contrary, for surely said Balaam, there is no enchantment in lacob, nor divination against litrael. And yet neverthelesse craving pardon if in any thing herein I have taken too much upon me, I have once ventured to commit my selfe to thy sensure, & doubt not of prosperous acceptance, if but a charitable construction be had of my true intent & meaning therein, as from a plaine country man, who intend not to pen any thing but what I shall be able to make appeare plainely to bee truth, and then I shall reckon it as a sufficient recompence for my labour and paines. And so with my due respects I take leave.

JOHN STEARNE.

CONFIRMATION and Difcovery of WITCHCRAFT

An being borne in finne, hath thereby fince the fall of our first parents lost the Image of God in which he was created, through the temptation of Satan, and is naturally, wholy polluted with finne and corruption, whereby he is become of very neere kin unto the Devill, even his owne child, 1 Iohn 3. 10. And that beeing his child, he will doe the lusts of his Father.

John 8. 44. and that no doubt in one thing as well as in another, for men love darkeneffe more than light, John 3. 19. Yea, and naturally are given to worke all uncleanneffe even with greedineffe, fo captivated are they to their lufts, Ephef. 4. 19. For Satan hath his wiles. Eybel. 11. his devices, 2 Cor. 2. 11. his depths and policies. Revel.2. 24. his fnares to catch people at unawares. 1 Tim. 3. 7. 2 Tim. 2. 26. And being thus furnished, hee dare set upon any, yea upon our Saviour Chrift himfelfe, to folicit him, yea, and to a most execrable implety, even to have Chrift to fall downe and to worship him a Devill, Mar. 4. for he watcheth opportunities, he fecketh occalions, and the leaft offer he expieth and quickly taketh the fame, and fo prevaileth often, not only with the rude and fottifh, but with the greateft fpirits and tharpeft witts many times. For man beeing given over to his unruly paffion, is violent, inconfiderate and vehemintly greedy to have his defired ends, by what meanes foever he can attaine them; which maketh him feeke meanes of the Devill to become injoyer of his inordinate defires, regarding more the having of his prefent will, than respecting his future state after death, and is more taken up to obtaine what he liketh for the body_ A Confirmation and discovery of Witch-craft.

dy and outward effate in this world, than with the care of his fpirituall condition and effate before God in the world to come, which the naturall man very little or nothing at all regardeth. This being the condition of a naturall man who remaines fill unregenerate and given over of God unto Satans temptation in this kind, how can they retift? Man is weake, Satan is flrong, and withall fubtill to beguile, they may eafily yeeld, for that he hath over mecre naturall men a ruling power, Epbef. 2. 2. who are already in his fnare, and at his owne will are taken captive, 2 Tim. 2. 26.

Here some will say, you goe about to make all subject to Witchcraft, or at least all unregenerate persons.

I answer, it said in John 3.6. That which is borne of the flesh is flesh, and that which is borne of the spirit is spirit : and therefore Witch-craft being as Saint Paul saith, Amongst the fruits of the flesh, *Gal.*5.20. one may fall into this sinne as a sinto any other, if God prevent it not. Wherefore it behooves man(if he would prevent the power of the Devill and what sover Witches can doe) to labour to entertaine and uphold the preaching of the Gospell. For where it commeth, downe goeth the power of Witcherie, Alis 8, and 13.

Hilforie likewise tells us, where the Gospel came among the heathen, there the hellich power of Devils and spirits greatly diminithed, and we heare now by travellers, that in other Countries where the Gofpel is not preached, & where they ftill remaine, (as I may fay) according to the abominations of the Canaanites, I meane in fuch places where the Heathens still remaine, as in the Indies, where they by travellers relations, worfhip the Sunne, Moone and Starrs, Nay I have heard in some places, the Devill himselfe, and where popery and prophanenesse is, with contempt of Preaching or vile neglect thereof, there Witch-craft is most rife. Therefore it behooves men to labour to bring forth fruits worthy the Gospell and amendment of life. For God hedgeth the vertuous man about, Iob 1. fo as Satan cannot come at him, without very speciall licence from God, and The Angels of God doe also pitch their that onely for a tryall. tents about fuch, Pfal. 34. yea, and have charge over them to keepe them in their waies, Plal. 91. 11, 12. And to have religious duties in our familics : and as the Apostle faith; to pray continually. I Thef. 5. And as Saint lames telleth us, Iam. 5. 16. that the prayer of a righteous man availeth much if it be fervent. David did not onely ferve A Confirmation and Discovery of Witch-craft.

ferve God openly in the Tabernacle, but returned home to bleffe his house, 2 Sum. 6. 20. And Job every day facrificed to God, and fan-Stified his children and family. Job 1.5. And God gave to Ifrael a law to fanctine their houses. And fo going ever well armed againti these rulers of darkenetle, devills and evill spirits, furnished with the heavenly furniture and (pirituall weapons of which the Apollle speaketh, Eph. 6.14.18. and being thus qualified, and armed. to truft in God only, who will keepe thee under the shadow of his wings, Pial. 91. No man shall neede to feare Witches or Devills; knowing ever this, that they cannot doe the very leaft harme unto any of the least creatures of God without leave from him: no. not to enter into the heard of fwine of the very Gardarens, for furely there is no inchantment in Iacob, nor any Divination against Israel. It is the Lord, let him doe what feemeth him good, 2 Sam. 15.26. It is the Lord that giveth, it is the Lord that taketh away, bleffed bee the name of the Lord, lob 1. 21) And therefore many yeeld thus farre as that Satan needes no provoker to fet him forward, as the Scripture tellsus. For the text faith, that he compaffeth the world to, and fro. lob 1. going up and downe like a roaring fyon feeking whom hee may devoure, 1 Pet. 5.8. He is ready (if God give waie) to bee a lying spirit in the mouth of Ababs Prophets to seduce him, 1 King. 22. and to beguile; and that the people which brought the poffeffed to our Saviour, complained only of the Devill, Mat. 15.2. Luk. 9.39. They made no mention of Witches, nor(for ought we know) had any fuipition of them, for we find that God hath often fent the Devill, as the executioner of his difpleafure without any meanes of a Witch. as amongst the Egyptians, he sent evill Angells, Plal.78.49. between Abimelech and the Sichemites, Judg. 9.23. So upon Saul, 1 Sam. 16.15. And fo we reade of a Legion fent by Christinto the heard of fwin. Mat. 5. 12. Thus we fee Devills immediately fent from God without any infligation of Witches. And therefore conclude that all is from the Devill by Godspermillion, and that there are no Witches at all. But wholoever thou beeft that art of this opinion, & although. many have gone about to prove that there are no Witches : yet befides the former reason, the contrary tenet is undeniable true, that there are Witches.

First, from the lawes that God himselfe hath made against them. First, in forbidding the practice of VVitch-eraft, and that none amongh his should be VVitches, VVizzards, Negromancers and fuch like, Deut. 18. 10, 11, 12. Secondly in forbidding any to go to them, Levier Levit. 19.20. Ija 8. 19. Thirdly, his commandement to put Witches to death, Exod. 22. 18. Fourthly, Gods judgements against them, Deut 18.12. which if there were no VV itches what neede these lawes?

Secondly, from the hillorie of the Bible, which nameth to us certaine VVitches, as the Socerers of Egypt, Fxod. 7. Iannes and Iambres, 2 Tim. 3. 8. Thole in Babylon and Persita, Dan. 2.5.7. If a. 47 12. And amongli the Nations driven out before the children of Ifrael, Deut. 18. 12, 13. So wee reade of other VVitches which were, of Balaam Numb. 22. Iof. 13. 22. Of Ifrael, 2 King. 9. 22. Of Manaffes, 2 Chron. 33. 6. Of Simon Magus, Alls 8.9. And Elimas, Alls 13.8. Secondly, it maketh mention of the practizes of Witches, Exod. 7. 2 Chron. 33. 6. If a. 47.9. Eze. 21 21. Thirdly, it seak.th of fome going to them, 1 Sam. 28.7. and fending to them, Numb. 22. 5. Iof. 24. 9. Fourthly, it relateth how forme Kings put them to death, 1 Sam. 28.3,9. and cut them off, 2 King. 23. 24. all this should be falle if there were no Witches.

Thirdly, from some Comparisons or Similies fetched from witch-craft, by Samuel, 1 Sam. 15. and by I_{a} . 29. 4. which were absurd if there were no Witches.

Fourthly, (as before) St Pauls mentioning Witch-craft amonght the workes of the flefh, Gal. 5.20.

Fifthly, Gods threatning damnation upon Socerers, Rev. 21.8. Sixtly, the Lawes of Nations both Heathen and Christian against them.

Seventhly, the truth of Histories, and manie relations of their Arraignement and conviction.

Eightly, experience amongst our selves, and in other Countries, together with the confession of some of those Witches condemned and executed fince May 1645. in the several l Counties afore mentioned, Hereaster, herein expressed, I hope will give all sufficient statifaction that there are Witches.

Now here fome may fay, this is fufficient to prove that there are Witches in fome Countries, or at leaft have beene in formes times with us here in this Country; but how will you make it appeare that there have been any fince the Gofpel preached amongft us? For many are of oppinion that there are Witches in other Countries where the Gofpel is not at all, or very little regarded, but where the Gofpel is faithfully preached as with us in England and Scotland, &c. that there are not any, no not fince the comming of our Saviour. A Confirmation and Discovery of Witchcraft.

I anfwer that if any man can make it appear that the Gofpell frees us from sinne, more then the Law did our forefathers, that then it might be fo. But the Gospell frees us not, and therefore we are as like to have fuch mildreants amongh us as our Forefathers. For we are as finful as in the time of the law. And Satan fill remains amongst us. And we are as impatient, profane, and unconscionable as ever, having diffempered paffions, violent in affection, given to ill company, and vain curiolities, not having respect of Religion. by which occalions the Devill taketh advantage and works to have his will, for he goeth thither where he is either fure or hopeth well for entertainment, Mat. 12. 44. He therefore watcheth the time when he may belt offer his fervice to fuch as any way he finds the least kind of preparednesse in, as when any fall into a passionate forrow, accompanied with folitarineffe for some loffe, as husband. wife, children or fuch like, the Devill offers himfelf to comfort fuch in their forrowfull melancholy mood. So in time of dearth through extreme poverty it many times caufeth many to be deforrately impatient; or fo impatient through poverty when they would needs be rich, even against Gods providence, as that they be in fuch a dift.mpered paffion, as they would have their wants fatisfied and their defires fulfilled, be it by what means it possible can be, (as I may fay) right or wrong; or when one is enraged with anger, plotting revenge, or is familiar with fuch as be Witches; As likewife when any are addicted to the reading and studie of dangerous books, inticing to the practice of hidden mysteries, of Magick and Inchantments. Thus by these and fuch other like means as may be gathered from the confessions of Witches, they prepare themselves for Satans temptations, to draw them to Witchcraft, as I could instance in those innumerable examples, as you shall read hereafter more at large when I come to fpeak of what forts of people are most addicted to Witchcraft; and therefore do you not conceive that there are fill fuch people remaining amongft us? yea certainly there are, and Witches likewife.

But you will fill fay it doth not yet plainly appear to be fo fince the Goloell, though all these finnes fill remain, for the Devil needs no provoker as before, for he can, if God permit, greatly trouble us, and can bereave one of his wits, and make one hunstick, deaf, dumb and blind, bow the body together, fo that one fnall not be able to lift up himself, he can even enter in and posselle any really B 2 and and make them invincibly firong, and work other effects. Of all which you may read in Manh.9.32 and 12.22 and 15.22 and 17.15. Mark.1.23 and 5.5,7 and 7.26 and 9.17,18,19,20, 22,25,26 and in Lule 4.35 and 7.2 and 8.29,39 and 11. 14. and 13.11, 16. and can enter into children, Luke 13.16. young folks, Mark 7. 26. Man, Mark 5.1,2,3. women, Luke 13.16. Matt. the 15.22. Yea through the permillion of God, fuch as be the elect of God. Job 1. and 2. A daughter of Abraham, Luke 13.11. & Mary Magdalene, Luke 7.2. & can counterfeit the refemblance of an holy man, 1 Sam.28.12.14.19. yea and for along time, Luke 8.27. from a child till one be grown up, Mark 9.21. even eighteen yeares, Luke 13.16. and for we reade in Luke 7.2. of feven Devills in one at once, and more Luke 11.26. Yea a whole legion, Mark 5.9, 16, 14. and fometimes the Lord is pleafed to fend Devills as executioners of his difpleafure, as is before expresed.

To this I answer, and grant it for truth, and not to be denyed, but yet notwithstanding all this, there are Witches likewife, and yet the Devill doth all this, and more if God permit, for in Gen.3. Wemay learne there that the Devill may enter into a dumb creature, & come out of the same, utter a voice intelligible,& offer conference (if any will hearken) to deceive as our Witches now a dayes confesse, and that he chooleth the subtilest creature to deceive by, and the weaker vessell to confer with, but by the confessions of Witches now lately detected, he choofeth fuch creatures as they themfelves are most addicted to, as you shall hereafter find by their confessions, by the feverall shapes he appears in, but how ever we may read there, it was a powerfull perfwalion to overcome, and yet work by Witchcs, Wizzards, Necromancers, Sorcerers, Southfayers, and all kind of Magick art, As we may reade in Exod. 7.11, 12. and 8. 7. Where we may fee that Pharaob called the Wifemen, the Sorcerers, and the Magicians of Egypt, who did with their inchantments in like manner as Mess and Aaron. But I paffe by the proofs out of the Old Testament for this because I defire to give such fatisfaction (as I and able) that it may appear that there be Witches now as in former ages. And if what hath been already spoken will not give satisfa-Etion herein, you may read in the 2. Tim. 3 8. who they were, that were the opplors of the truth, but fuch as Fannes and Fambres, who withflood Moles, and then fearch who they were, and you fhall find they were fuch as Pharaob called to him, as in the before mentioned places, who with their inchantments did the like as Mofes had done. So

б

So you may read of Elymas the Sorcerer, All. 13. 8. who refifted the Apofiles in the time of the Gospell.

Solikewife in Ad. S 9. you thall read of Simon Magus a forcerer, to whom in the 10 verfeit is faid, they all gave heed from the least to the greateft, faying, this man is the great power of God, For in the 11. verfeits is faid, because that of long time he had bewitched them with forceries, and in the 13 verfe we read he was baptiled, but read the 20, 21, 22, and you shall read what Peter faid to him, and fo read no more of him in all the New Teftament.

Alfo in the Rev.21.8. you may read how Sorcerers shall with other sinners there reckoned up, have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone.

And fo likewife we read in the Epiftle of Jude the Apoftle speaking there of falle Teachers, which were crept into the Church to feduce them, for whofe damnable doctrine and manners, horrible judgement was prepared, in the 11. verle pronounceth woe unto them, for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ranne greedily after the error of Balaam, by which we may plainly fee that there were Witches in the time of the Gofpel, and after the coming and ascension of our Savionr, and do any doubt then, whether there be any now? do any think that we be free from fuch, where finne and ignorance belides fo much abounds ? or do you defire to have proof of Witches lince then, you shall have enough of their confessions to make this evident, belides the relations of learned men writing concerning Witchcraft. But if you would but rightly obferve that place in 2. Tim. 3. 1 and fo on to the 8 you shall find that in the last dayes shall come perillous times, &c. And in the 8. verse it is faid, And as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moles, fo do those also result the truth. There you may see plainly that there thould be fuch to the latter end, befides in divers other places speaking expressely of Witchcraft ; as 1. Tim. 4. 1. and Jude 18.

Likewife of the Pythoneffe which brought her mistris much gain Alls 16.16. Also in *Rev.*21.8. And fo I might nominate divers other places, for those which remain doubtfull either of being bewitched or of Witches themselves, but because their own cenfessions clear this evidently, besides the forenamed places, I proceed to diffinguish between those called bad Witches, and those called white or good Witches, which is easily to be d'cerned and known.

But yet I fay all Witches be bad, and ought to fuffer alike, being B 3 both both in league with the Devill : for fo is the good, fo untruly called, afwell as the other, either open or implicit. And therefore I conclude, all that be in open league with the Devill ought to, die. And the Scripture maketh mention onely of ten forts, which fpeakes rather of those called the good, which the world fo much tunnes after, then the other. As we may read: First in Deut. 18. 10.2 Kings 17.1.0f a Diviner foreshewing things to come. Such the people delighted in and confulted with, Jer. 27. 9. Ezek. 21. 22. Such an one was Balaam, Iof. 13. 22.

Secondly, We read in Deut. 18. 10. of an Observer of times, or Soothfayer, one which by gaping on the Heavens could also foretell something. To these likewise did the people give eare, Jer. 27. 9. And such an one was Manasses. 2 Chron. 33. 6. And what was Elimas the Sorcerer spoken of in the Ass?

Thirdly, we read in Deut. 18. 10. of an Observer of times, or scarcher out; One which observed times to know when it was best to begin a businesse: as Hamans Witches did by cassing of lots before him. Of this Manasses also was guilty, 2 Chro. 33.6. To which might be added that in Hester. 3. 7. and 9. 24.

Fourthly, we read in Deut. 18. 10. If a. 47. 12. of a Magician, one that could deceive the Eye-fight by making fomething to appeare otherwise then it is. Such Pharaob called to him to oppose Moses. Herein, Jannes and Jambres, of whom Saint Paul speaketh of, were guilty, and so likewise was Manasses, 2 Chron. 33.6.

Fifthly, we read in Deut. 18. 11. of an Inchanter, or Conjurer; one joyned in league with another, as the Witch is with the Devill. Such an one uled Charmes to tame Serpents, Ffal. 58. 5. Many fuch were in Babylon,' I(a. 47.9. and Eccl. 10. 11.

Sixthly, we read in Deu^{1} . 18. 11. Lev. 20. Of one which hath a spirit in him or her which doth give answer to such as come to inquire of them. Such an one was the Witch of Endor, Sam. 28. Such an one was the Pythonesse which brought her Mistris much gaine, Asis 16. $\ln I/a$. 29. 4 called a Whisperer. To such the people had regulard, Lev. 19. 21. and incouraged one another thereunto, I/a. 8. 19.

Seventhly, wee read in Deut. 18. 11. of a Wizzard, 1 Sam. 28. 9. One allo which could foretell fome things, and fo called for his or her foreknowledge; as now we terme them a wife man, or a wife woman. After this fort the people fought also, Lev. 19.31: and 20. 6. Eighthly, Eighthly, we read in Deu. 18. 41. of a Negromancer, one that confulteth with the dead. Id. 8. 9.

Ninthly, we read in I_{1a} . 19.3. of a VV hisperer, with forret or foft words, as our white VV itches doe, indeavouring to help man or beall. To these the Egyptians fought after, as they did to their Idolls, as in the last forementioned place is expressed. These are now (as I have read) translated Charmers.

Tenthly, we read in Exod. 8. 11. of fuch as Pharaob fought to, as we call them Juglers, deceivers, beguiling the eye-fight. Some hold them to be callers of Nativities, which tell people their fortune by the time of their birth. These are onely expressed in the Old Testament : But the New speaketh, as I may fay, onely in generall against VVitch-craft, which comprehends all the ten aforementioned. And therefore it cannot be denyed, belides their confellions herafter herein expressed, but that there are such to this time, and that they all ought to fuffer alike, which have made an expresse league with the Devill. An art so exectable, to renounce God, and to betake themselves to the Devill, as for this thing onely they deferve death in the higheft degree : for the Law of God faith without exception, Thou shalt not fuffer a VVitch to live, Exod. 22 18. It a Witch justly convicted, Death is due to fuch an one, Levit. 20. 27. For, for those abominations the Lord utterly destroyed the Canaanites, and plagued Manaffes, which wickneffe of his was to abhorred of God, as in his displeasure hee mentioned it many yeares after, as a caule of removing the Ferres from their Land, and of leading them away captive into a ftrange Land, Her. 15. 4. And did not good King Josiab put fuch forrs to dea h that he might fulfill the Law? 2 Kings 23. 24. And fo did Saul, S. n. 28. Nav, bath not the Lord threatned great Judgements in the aforementional places? Yea, and doth he not by the P. ophet promile to cut off VVitch-crafts and Soothfavers, when he intends to bleffe a Nation ? Mich. 5, 12.

Now, who they be that make this exprete or open league, are both forts. But for the hurting and curling VVitch, there is but one fort. All which makes this expresse or open league; and they doe it onely for milchief, though feverall wayes : for they take their Familiars: Some for one milchief, some for another. When as there be two forts of the other; the one in expresse and open league, for fo I tearme it, though made never so fecret, because it is is done by conference with the Davill; And the other is by implicit, or fecret league, onely by confidence in believing, that fuch or luch a thing shall produce such, or such an effect. Now the first of these two have Familiars, as well as the other, or at least a brand, by which they may be known and differned by, as well as the first. Some to fet spells; Some Charmes; Some to cure difeafes leverall wayes, either by words, or walking clothes, or aanoynting the Inftrument which gave the wound to cure the wound; Some onely by laying on ofc their hands; Some by ufing and faying superstitious words, or forme of prayers, using good words to bad ends; Some by both; Some by herbes; Some to know where stolen goods be, either by raising the Devill, or Familiar Spirits ; Some onely by words, and to likewife the fame for loft goods, or man or beaft, and to bring them againe ; and fo by many fuch like wayes and meanes doe thefe worke by : Yet many times they erre, all of these: For the Devill cannot performe his promises at all times. So that it is not to be queffioned. but all these forts are in league with the Devill. For it is not to be doubted, but before any of them can have power to doe any thing, against, or for any parry, or have any defired ends effected, the league expresse or implicit is first made ; bee it expresse then confirmed; but for the Confirmation hereof their confessions will make it plainely appeare, and plaine proofes and reasons for the other, that they confidently trult that their defires fhall be effected accordingly to their beliefe, as the curing Witches doe of them which come to them for help. All which I will make plainely appeare, when I come to speake how they may be known. For here fome may first demand of mee what forts of people they be of either forts?

I answer, as for the first fort most women, and for the other most men. And albeit there be of both forts of both : as Elimas the Sorcerer, and Simon Magus, and so likewise Balaam, and the Witch of Endor, and of these young, middle, and old age, of which instances may be given; Yet of Witches in generall, there be commonly more women then men. This is evident.

First, from Gods Law against Witches, Exod. 22. In the feminine gender, fræstigiatticem ne sinito vivere.

Secondly, from Sauls speech, when he faid, Seeke one out, a woman that hath a familiar spirit, Sam 28 7.1 Chron. 10 13, 14. in naming a woman and not a man. Thirdly A Confirmation and Discovery of Witchcraft.

Thirdly, from experience it is found true here, and in all Countries, especially of hurting Witches, that they are most in number, as appeares by their owne confessions, with the stories and relations even from thele in our owne Kingdome. As of those of Burton-Old, where there met above fourescore at a time ; And at Tilbrooke bushes in Bedfordsbier, neere adjacent to Catworth; in Huntingtonsheir, where there met above twenty at one time, as John Wynick , and others confessed who suffered at Huntington last May was two yeares : As allo by the confellions of fome others which fuffered at Northampton not long before ; So likewife were those which met at Manningtree in Effex, as Elizabeth Clarke, and Anne Leech confessed, and those which were condemned. there being about twenty eight, at Chelmsford, in the fummer 1645. were (as I remember) all women. And those at Eurie Saint Edmunds, where fixtie eight were (as 1 likewise remember) condemned, most women, All at one Goale delivery, in the fummer 1645. So I could nominate farre more instances in other places, and of about two hundred executed fince the faid May. 1645. in the feverall Counties aforementioned, the women farre exceeded the men in number. And as I have read, those in Lancasheire, where ninteene affembled, and but two men, and that th ofe that bewitched the Earle of Rutland were women ; and that those of Warboyes were women, and but one man. Women therefore without queftion exceed men, especially of the hurting Witches ; but for the other, I have knowne more men, and have heard fuch as have gone to them fay, almost generally they be men, and fo likewise finde them to be fo in Authors, which speake of fuch, and never knew any women questioned in that way but men, and of them as hitherto not many; For as before, men rather uphold them, and fay, why fould any man be queftioned for doing good; but I am certaine the word of God is contrary.

Now, why it fhould be that women exceed men in this kind, 1 will not fay, that Satans fetting upon thefe rather then man is, or like to be, becaufe of his unhappy onfet and prevailing with Eve; or their more credulous nature, and apt to bee milled, for that they be commonly impatient, and being difpleafed more malicious, and fo more apt to revenge according to their power, and thereby more fit inftruments for the Devill; or that, becaufe they C be more ready to be teachers of Witchcraft to other, and to leave it to Children, fervants, or to fome others (but that you fhall finde to be a great inducement thereto by their Confeffions) or that, becaufe, where they can command they are more fierce in their rule, and revengefull in fetting fuch on worke whom they can command, wherefore the Devill laboureth most to make them Witches : for Satan is fubtill, and feeketh whom he may devoure, and if falfe teachers.

But as Saint Faul faith, VVitchcraft being amonght the fruits of the flefb, one may fall into this tinne as well as into any other (if God prevent it not) and therefore whether men or women, These forts following are the aptest, as by experience plainely appeares amonght us now a dayes.

I passe by Insidels, and Heathen people in former times (from whom these abominations mentioned in Deut. 18. 10, 11. came into Israel, and savage Nations now (amongst whom) by Travellers relations, VV itchcraft is most rife) and will speake onely of such forts as be called Christians, and these be,

First, ignorant people whose eyes are blinded by Satan, 2 Cor.4. 4. and are led captive by him, as is said in another place.

This appeareth in those VVitches commonly detected amongst us, filly ignorant perfons many of them. Elizabeth Deekes of Ratlesden, in Suffolk, a filly ignorant young woman being found with the markes, confessed that the was guilty, and had two crop eared Impes, as the faid, which had fucked two or three times upon those markes found upon her, which Impes (she faid)came like Mice; the one white, which the called Birds, being the leaft, the other gray, which the called Teates, which Impe asked her to denye God, and Chrift, and told her if the would the thould never want, but she faid she then refused: Whereupon (she faid) her mother asked her to give her foule from God to the Devill, which (fle faid) the likewife refused : but as the was going to bed, cither upon a paire of staires, or ladder, her mother pulled her back in much danger of her life, and confeffed many other things then more at large. But for her ignorance the was faved at firlt, when her mo her fulfered, yet alterward, notwithstanding this, and her refuling those temptations, the confelled, the did make a I eague and Covenant with the Devill, and fealed it with her bloud, and imployed those Impes, to the much prejudice of her Neighbours

Neighbours and Townsmen, as the confessed before the Juffice. of Peace. Allo Joane Wallis of Keyfon, in Huntington feir, a very ignorant, fottish woman, confelled the Devill came to her in the likeneffe of a man, in blackish cloathing, but had cloven feet. which the called Blackman, who used to lie with her, and have the the after body, yet the confelled he was more uglier then man, and not as her husband, which speaks to her like a man, but he as he had been some distance from her when he was with her, who told her, if the would be ruled by him the thould never want, but thould have what the defired, and brought her two others the third time he came, which (fhe faid) fhe called Grizzell, and Greedigut, for fo (fhe faid) they called themfelves, and that those, after fhee had confented to the other his demands, and confirmed the Covenant, the could and did imploy as thee then further confessed, both to the Townsenien, and after to the Justice of Peace, and fome of the milchiefes the had done. Ennumerable of these instances I could nominate in many of their Confessions, as you shall finde in some of those following. But I delire to Answer one objection before I proceed further (that is) fome fay, and many will and doe fay; But you watched them, and kept them from meat, drinke, or reft, and fo made them fay what you would. A very unnaturall part fo to use Christians. I answer fo it were. But I never knew any deprived of meat, drinke or reft, but had what was fitting till they were carried before fome Juffice of Peace to be examined, and had provision to reft upon, as bolfters, pillowes, or Cushions, and fuch like, if they were kept where no beds were ; vet I doe not deny but at first, some were kept two, three, or foure dayes, perchance somewhat baser, but then it hath been, either when no Justice of Peace was neere, or when the witneffes against them could not goe fooner, but then they have had beds, and for other provision, I never knew any kept, of what ranke or quality foever, but that they had better provision, either meate or drinke, then at their own houses.' For the watching, it is not to use violence, or extremity to force them to confesse, but onely the keeping is, first, to fee whether any of their spirits, or familiars come to or neere them; for I have found, that if the time be come, the fpirit or Impe fo called fhould come, it will be either visible or invilible, if vilible, then it may bee discerned by those in the Roome, if invisible, then by the party. Secondly, it is for this end end alfo, that if the parties which watch them, be fo carefull that none come vinible, nor invinible but may be differred, it they follow their directions, then the party prefently atter the time their Familiars thould have come, if they faile, will prefently confeffe, for then they thinke they will either come resumper, or atleaft have forfaken them.

Thirdly, it is also to the end, that Godly Divines and others might discourse with them, and idle perfons be kept from them, for if any of their fociety come to them to difcourfe with them, they will never confesse; This was observed at Bury Saint Edmunds in Suffolk, as' remember, when there were eighteene to be executed ; molt of them kept in a Barne together, they made a Covenant amongst themselves, not to confesse a word next day at the gallowes, when they were to be hanged, notwithstanding they had formerly confessed, and some of them after they came into the Goale, and some before the Bench and Country, but most of them (if not all) before the Justices of the Peace, and fo dyed next day accordingly very desperately, except one penitent woman which refused their Covenant or agreement : fo the made it knowne, and how they made a finging of a Pfalme after they had done it. But if honeft godly people discourse with them, laying the hainous field of their fins to them, and in what condition they are in without Repentance, and telling them the fubtilities of the Devill, and the mercies of God, these wayes will bring them to Confession without extremity, it will make them breake into Confellion hoping for mercy.

Now that the Impes come visible, it is true and apparent, and to watching hath produced true and strange effects, and is a great meanes (under God) to bring them to confession, as for example; Elizabetb Clarke of Manningtree in Essex, bring kept three dayes and three nights, shee confession the strange, but how the was kept I know not well, for I came not at her during that time, notwithstanding I lived then in Towne, and was one which caused her to be quessioned, who did accuse fome others which lived in their severall Parishes, the Townstemen desired me to goe with her confession taken in writing by another, to the Justices of the Peace for a warrant for those the accused, the warrant was made for the fearching of such perfons as I thould nominate, whereupon, I would first goe to her before the Warrant should be A confirmation and Discovery of Witchcraft.

be ferved, to know of her who the did accuse; Mr. Hopkin being with mee went together, and when I had asked her who fhee had acculed, we were agoing away; but the faid to us, if you will flay, I will flew you my Impes, for they bee ready to come. Then faid Mr. Hopkin . Beffe, will they due us no harme? no faid fhe, what? did you thinke I am afraid of my children ? you shall fit downe, fo wee did, where the appointed us. Then one of the company which was appointed to be with her that night, faid to her, Belle, 1 asked you a quellion of late, but you anlwered not, then the faid, what is it ? Then he replyed and faid, tell the truth, if it be the truth, fay fo, but if not truth, then fay fo, Hath not the Devill had the use of your body? she faid, why should you aske fuch a queftion ? he answerd, I defire to know the truth and no otherwife, then the fetched a figh, and faid, it is true, then faid Mr. Hopkin, in what manner and likeneffe came he to you ? flice faid, like a tall, proper, black haired gentleman, a properer man then your felfe, and being asked which the had rather lie withall, thee faid the Devill, and fo particularized every thing, and how hee came in, and his habit, and how he lay with her, and spoke to her, as the then affirmed to bee truth, and fo prefently fell a fmacking with her lips and called Lought two or three times, which prefently appeared to us eight (For there were fix which were appointed to bee with her that night before we went) in the likeneffe of a Cat, as fhe had formerly told us; for the told us before what thapes they thould come in and to that presently vanished; then she called againe as before, Jermarah, then appeared another, like a red or fandie spotted dog, with legs not fo long as a finger (to our perceivance) but his back as broad as two dogs, or broader, of that bigneffe, and vanished, and fo after that called more, as before, by their feverall names, which came in feverall shapes, One like a Greyhound, with legs as long as a Stagge; Another like a Ferrit; And one like a Rabbit, and fo in feverall shapes they appeared to us, till there were some feven or eight feen ; Some by fome of us, and others by other fome of us; then I asked her if they were not all come, for there were more come then the fpoke of, the answered that they came double in feverall shapes, but faid, one was still to come, which was to teare mee in peeces, then I asked her why, the faid, becaufe I would have fwome her, and told me that now shee would bee even even with mee, and fo told in what manner it fhould come, black, and like a Toade, and fo afterward did come, as the reft averred that faw it, and fo the confelled their meetings, and the manner how they worthipped the Devill at their meetings, and faid to us, they that be found with these markes that I am found withall, are without quefiion Witches, yetfaid, that there might be tome Witches which had not those markes ; but affirmed it over and over again, that all those that had those markes were Witches, and had familiar fpirits which fucked of them, and fo confeffed what milchiefe the had done with her Impes, in a very large manner, and fo did next day, after the had flept ; for the Juffice gave me order that the thould fleepe before he examined her, left thee had not flept before, and fo I did accordingly, and yet thee then confeffed at large before two Juffices of the Peace, and how fhee would have been my death; this was the first accused, and her markes and confession, the beginning of our knowledge : Yet I confesse, the markes be difficult to finde from naturall markes; as I thall hereafter declare. Rebecca West of Lamford, in Esfex, who was (as the confetted) married to the Devill, and the manner, had an Impe came to her in the time the was kept, but of her confession more at large hereafter. Also Elizabeth Finch of Watfon in Suffolke, confelled, that about twenty yeares before thee was found with the markes, the Devill appeared to her in the likeneffe of a smoaky coloured Dog, which asked her to deny God and Chrift, which the faid, upon his promifes the did, and let him have bloud to feale, or confirme the Covenant or agreement; and that foone after that, there came two more, black on the backs and reddith on the bellies, which fucked her two or three times a week, upon those markes that were found on her, and that sometimes the fetched bloud in other places for them. and gave it to them; flee allo had her Impes came visible; For the confested in the time thee was kept, one which was with her to looke to her, faw one of them, and fung it into the fire, which the affirmed was one of her Impes, and that whileft they were bulie about that, thinking to burne it, the confelled the other came, and threw her out of the chaire the fate in, which hurt her forehead and wrelt, which was done accordingly, and fo further confessed. Of these I could bring diverse instances, but I will proceed They come likewife invitible; as one Binkes of Haverill, verill had an Impe fucking of her whill the was talking with others, and presently confessed it Another whilest I was in the roome with her, at Huntington, I perceived by her carriage that the was afucking her Impes, Spirits, or Familiars fo called ; I layed it to her charge, but the denied it : Yet prefently after the confeffed it was truth, when the was asked by the Juffice of Peace. And as I remember, it was the fame woman; but I am fure of Keyston in Huntingtonshier, and io was the, that to the thinking of two which were with her, the fate still in her chaire, when two more in the yard faw her goe out into the yard, and her going in againe; This woman confessed the Devill fate in her likenesse, and the went out, and fuckled her Impes in the yard, as the other two affirmed. So in the fame Towne, one Clarkes wife skipped out at a hole in a stone wall, above halfe a foot thick, which was fome nine Inches long, and fome foure and a halfe broad, all the one fide head and all, and but little to bee feen of her but one leg; and the hole was neere a yard and halfe from the ground, and yet one pulled her back againe, and afterward went away, nobody knew how : yet I fay, if those which looke to them be carefull, it is to be differned; this is apparent by that I nominated at Huntington. And to at Codman in Suffolke, being told how a woman there carried her felfe, 1 caufed her to be fearched againe, and there was alteration of the markes, and the woman prefently confessed it, and made a large confession; and so it hath been common in all our proceedings, and a great caufe for keeping them; for the bloud hath fometimes been found on the end of the marke, or to be ftroked ou't when they be taken on a fuddaine, As I could inftance the one halfe of their confessions; but because it is to apparent, I inflance no further. But now to manifest that good Countell will doe it, and so likewife without keeping; for I hold they two depend most upon one : Then fay 1, that upon good exhortations after the markes found, they may be brought to confellion, either by keeping, though every thing neceffary be afforded them, as I never did otherwife, but now lately keepe none, or not above one night till we goe thence, and yet have their confellions. Witneffe those executed at Elie, a litle before Michaelmas last, who made large confessions. Allo one at Chatterifb there; One at March there; And another at I im-Elington there, now lately found, fill to be tryed, who made very large large confellions, especially the first two; Nicholas Hempstead of Creeting in Suffolke, being found, upon exhortations, and laying the hainousnelle of the linne, and Gods Judgements, and Gods mercie, and the like, notwithstanding hee at first railed on me in very approbious tearmes, yet prefently fent for me, and would have asked mee forgivenelle, he prefently confeffed shat hee had made a league and Covenant with the Devill, and how hee had confirmed it with his bloud; And the thape of his Impes, and of the Devill when they covenanted, and how he killed a horse of one of the Conliables, because he pressed him for a souldier, and five of the best horses in Colonell Rochesters Troope ; And divers other things he had done, making a very large confellion. with a great deale of penitency and forrow, which hee fo continued in (as I fince heard) to his very execution without alteration. To this I might adde, Henry Carrs hereafter mentioned: And the boyes next, after the objections answered, and diverse others which you shall here finde ; but because it falleth out better. when I fhall speake how to discover them, I leave here; hoping this is fufficient for that objection, if not, I will answer more fully, as occasion shall ferve. But then some will fay, you swome fome of them, especially at the first, was not that extremity ? I anfwer, that bath been ufed, and I durft not goe about to cleere my felic of it, because formerly lused it, but it was at such time of the yearc as when none tooke any harme by it, neither did I ever doe it but upon their owne requelt ; and were to fuch as first were found with the markes; but now lately, there hath been no fuch courfe taken that I know of. For I am of opinion, that it is one way of ditirulting of Gods providence, putting confidence that that fhall bring fuch or fuch an effect, or event; neither was it ever given in or taken, that I know, as an evidence against any nor used by any of us but the first summer, from March, or May 1645. to about the middle of August next following; when Judge Corbelt that now is, forwarned it; When Divines gave their opinion of the unlawfuineffe thereof, it hath ever fince been left, and not many before fo uled : Notwithstanding, it was then the defire of fuch perfons themselves, thinking thereby to cleare themselves, whereas it fell out otherwife. Yet under favour, Let me speake one thing that I have found in that way; that it is a true rule in one refpect, that the yvater entreth not into any of them, when it A Confirmation and Discovery of Witchcraft.

it will into a free perfon, though they fwimme both alike; for to they will, if the water be inchanted, but the free perfon will prefently be choaked, when the other lye topling on the water. Itriving to get their heads, or themfelves under the water, but cannot, neither can they bring out water in their mouthes. though they be foretold of it, nor ipit cleare water; for the water enters them not when it will the other Thus farre I have observed. or further : But because it is held unlawfull, I should be forry to speake any thing, either to give offence to any, or to be a meanes to animate any in fuch courses. For if any did confesse, rather then to goe into the water, or to come out of the water, or prefently after, except they had been shifted, and refreshed every way, andknowne to be in perfect memory, it hath been taken as no evidence; and to hath all other forcement been. But there is one, a very remarkable thing concerning this, that was done at Saint Neotts, in Huntingtonshire, of a woman that had been fearched two or three times, and not found, for they can hide their markes fometimes, as you shall heare after herein, yet was still in great fulpicion of many of the Townsmen to be guilty (the brand is difficult to finde if the had notice) and the rather, for that the fled, or went away after the was fearched twice, for fome are not found at first, yet be in the end : So at her returne fome would fwim her. and did, the fwum apparently, where they had formerly caft a freeman in, tyed after the same manner, she was not further medled with then. But as I have heard, and in part from the man himfelf. where the act (hould be done, A Dog was feen in his yard, which a Mastie Dog would not seize on, but his son stroke at the Dog, and hatt him two or three blowes over the back, up to the shouldersward, prefently a gelt bitch feized on him, and bit him on the neck, and gave him fome shuckes, and then the Dog got away : fo it remained, but this woman not being feen in the ftreet as formerly, was caused to be viewed; and found bitten on the neck, or bruised on the other parts in a most fearfull manner. Thefe are fome fimilitudes, that there is fomething in fwimming (if lawfull) but to proceed. This one more, that ignorant people are most apt to be Witches, as afore faid. Of a Boy in Ratlesdon aforefaid, who was accufed, when he was under nine yeares of age, when all know he could not be of much capacity, hee without watching, or keeping, voluntarily confelled, that hee D fuckled fuckled an Impe, and had it at command to doe milchiefe, and nominated fome, as the killing of fome Chickings, and fome cther mischiefes he had then done, as he confelled, together with the reasons he cauled his large to kill the Chickens, which was, because the man which owed them had childen him for spoyling his graffe, when, as he faid, they did it, fo the next time he faw them there, he did it. This boy being young, 1 (fuppole the Jury had hopes of his amendment, as I confelle I then had) he was then releated, and went to the Towne againe, where he continued fome time, and was fulpected againe for further milchiefe, and to apprehended againe, and put into prifon, where he then voluntarily confeffed likewife his renewing of the league and Covenant with the Devill, and the fealing of it with his bloud, after his mother was hanged; for the fuffered for Witchcraft, about the Michaelmas 1645. and then was he first questioned, and that he had more familiar spirits, or Impes, as they call them, and that the Devill appeared to him, in the likeneffe of a black brovvne Mare, and would carrie him whither hee defired, and confessed abundance of mischiefe he had done, between the time he was releafed, and committed againe. But after hee was in Burie Goale, not long before the Affizes, the first fince these warres, the Goaler milling a Prifoner in the morning, which he had over night, a notorious offender, whom he kept double thackled, the Goaler questioned this boy, and upon fome threatning speeches, the boy confessed, that he was gone home on his Mare over the walls, and thewed where, and told him he thould finde him with his wife ; whereupon, the Goaler fent forthwith to the Prifoners house, being at least twelve miles, and there found him at his house, as the boy had said, having shackles on as he went out. Will this with the other give you fatisfaction? but I might adde to this, superstitious and Idolatrous persons. But I paffe, intending onely to take the heads, agreeing with the confellions of Witches.

Secondly, malicious people, full of revenge, having hearts fwolne with rancour, upon the least difpleafure, with bitter bannings and curfes, threatning revenge, or requitalls : this is manifest by the nature, quality, words, and deeds of Witches convicted, who have shewed themselves to be such, as ever found fo to be, as the faid Jehn Wynnick confest, that when hee lived at Thrat for in Northampton feir, he having loft his purfe with fome foven faillings in it, as he was in a Barne, where he lived, there in an lune, as hee was making up of bottles of hay, hee was in a pattion for his purfe and money, and in fuch a rage of binning and curting, that he was faying to kimfelfe, would hee knew where he might goe to a cunning man for it, for have it he would, though he went to the Devill for it; (here was a picparednefie for the Devill) for he confelled, the Devill appeared to him immediately, in the likeneffe of a Beare, but not above the bigneffe of a Rabbit, yvhich told him, if hee would fall downe and worthip him, he would help him to his purfe, and money againe, and that he fhould have it where he flood, next day about the fame time; fo he did fall downe and worft ip him; And next day he came againe, to fee for his purfe and money, and found it accordingly, but confeffed, that before he could tell it, the Devill in the tame shape appeared to him againe, and told him, hee mult fall downe and worship him againe, and then he fell downe, and faid, Oh my Lord, my God, I thanke thee, and then hee asked him to deny God, and Chrift, and to ferve him as Lord. and then he thould never want, which he confelfed he confented to, then he demanded bloud, and he bade him take it, fo he skipped on his thoulder, and fetched bloud with his claw, on the lide of his head, which marke was feen at his Tryall; Then he confelled, there appeared two more, which the first told him hee must worship allo, and take them for his Gods, and they thould be at his command, and fo he faid, he did; then that like a Beare turned like a Ratt, and fo those fucked on the three marks I found on him, after to the time he was taken, at their times appointed, and were at his command, as he then confeffed more at large, before the Juffices of the Peace, and confeffed at the Gallowes likewife, the last words he spoke. Also one Moores wife of Sutton, in the Isle of Elie, in the County of Cambridge, after the had confelled the league and Covenant made, and fealed with her bloud, confelled, that the fent one of her Impes to kill a man, or at leaft to hurt to him; for that she had bought a Pigge of him, for two shillings and two pence, and paid him/two shillings, and afterward he comming by her dore, asked her for it, which man, was foone after taken lick, and in his lickneffe, cryed out of her, faying he could not depart this life, untill hee had spoken with D 2 her.

her, fo she was fent for, but she refused, whereupon (he lying in such extremity) she was by some of his friends, at his request, being fo delitous to speake with her in fuch extremity, forced to goe to him, and then toone after he dyed, according as hee formerly faid; So this woman confelled divers other things, and feemed to be very penitent, and forry for it, for she wept at her tryall, and conteffed her felfe guilty before the Judge, Bench, and Country; But what she did after, or at her Execution, I know not. Thomazine Ratcliffe of Shellie, in Suffolke, confelfed, that it was malice that had brought her to that she was come to, meaning Witchcraft; for she confelled, that soone after her husbands deceafe, above twenty yeares before her confession, there came one in the likeuesse of a man, into bed to her, which spoke with a hollow, shrill voyce, and told her, he would be a loving husband to her, if she would confent to him, which she faid, she did, and then he told her, he would revenge her of all her enemies, and that she should never mille any thing, in which she faid, she found him a lyer, but faid, that Satan often tempted her to banning, fivearing, and curling, which shee confelled she did use a long time, and that many times it fell out accordingly, and that she, falling out with one Marins wife, who had a child drowned, for that she called her Witch, faying, she was the caufe of the childs drowning, she bad her goe home and look to the reft, left she loft more, and one died fuddenly after. Alfo Anne Kardall of Lauenbam in Suffolke, after she had confessed the Covenant, for still you must remember, that is first done, before the Devill, or their Familiars, or Impes, act, or doe any thing, confeffed that she had two Impes, which were heavie and foft, but came in the likeneffe of Cats, or Kitlins, of a blew colour, called Hangman, and facob, and that those sucked on the markes were found upon her body, fome thirty yeares together : fomet mes once a weeke, sometimes once a fortnight, and that shee i nt her Impe Hangman to kill a horfe of one William Baldwins of Thorre, some two miles from Lauenham, for that she asked him to bring her in some wood, and he bad her pay for that she had had firit; and the Impereturned, and told her he had done, he had killed two, for they were languelled together, fo he killed them both, which horfes were killed (but in fuch a tempeft) as was surposed by a Devill in Thunder, untill she confessed it of her A confirmation and Discovery of Witchcraft.

her felfe. Also she confeffed, that being at Stephen Humfries in Therpe aforefaid, and a begging for Almes, hee came home well, and fhe being at the doore, he chid her, or gave her fuch words as the liked not of; As the went over the way from the houfe, her Impe Hangman appeared to her, and asked her what he fould doe, and she bad him goe and kill one of his Hogs, which thee law, which the faid he did before the was out of fight, which Hog died accordingly. Likewife the further confetted, that the being angry with one Mr. Coppinger of Lavenham, the fent her Impe Facob to carry away bulkes, which he had caufed to be laid to fence his fences, above one load, here some, and there some, all along by the hedge fide, as they were to be hedged out, and in one night they were gone, no man knew what way, untill fuch time as the confessed her Impe did it But as I have fince heard, they were knowne to be in another mans ground, who confelled, they came the fame night, but how, he knew not till then. Alfo a young man of Denford, in Northampuonshire, who suffered for Witchery fince the faid time, at Northampton, Confessed, that he fent one of his Impes, to one Cockes Cattell of Derford, becaufe he would not let him keep them, and the Cattell ranne fo viclently away foming, that the owner had much adoe to catch them with a horfe, and more to get them home into his yard againe; and fo many other things he confessed, as I could particularly instance. And fo for this, I hope it is fufficient, to give all fatisfaction, for all confessions, or most of them at leash, tend to prove this in some part. Those that are given to over much curiofity, to feeke after vaine Knowledge, in pride of heart to goebeyond others; to understand secret and hidden things, to know things to come. Such are those, as not bounding themselves within the limits of reason, nor of Gods revealed will, fall fowle unawares upon the Devill, and are in great danger to be intrapped by him, and made his flaves by his inticements. Thus was Parlon Lowis taken, who had been a Minifters (as I have heard) in one Parish above forty yeares, in Suffolke, before he was condemned, but had been indited for a common imbariter, and for Witchcraft, above thirty yeares before, and the grand Jury (as I have heard) found the bill for a common imbarriter, who now, after he was found with the markes, in his confeilion, he confeiled, that in pride of heart, to be equall, or D 2 rather rather above God, the Devill tooke advantage of him, and hee covenanted with the Devill, and fealed it with his bloud, and had three Familiars or fpirits, which fucked on the markes found upon his body, and did much harme, both by Sea and Land, effectially by Sea, for he confelled, that he being at Lancarfort in Suffolke, where he preached, as he walked upon the wall. or workes there, he faw a great faile of Ships pafie by, and that as they were failing by, one of his three Impes, namely his yellow one, forthwith appeared to him, and asked him what hee frould doe, and he bade it goe and tinke fuch a Ship, and Ricked his Impe a new Ship, amongh the middle of the reft (as I remember) one that belonged to Ipiwich, to he confelled the Impe went forthwith away, and he flood till, and viewed the Ships on the Sea as they were a fayling, and perceived that Ship immediately, to be in more trouble and danger then the reft; for he faid, the water was more boyfrous neere that then the reft, tumbling up and downe with waves, as if water had been boyled in a por, and foone after (he faid) in a fhort time it fanke dir. Cily downe into the Sea, as he food and viewed it, when all the reft fayled away infafety, there he confested, he made fourteen widdowes in one quarter of an houre. Then Mr. Hejkin, as he told me (for he tooke his Confellion) asked him, if it did not grieve him to fee fo many men caft away, in a frost time, and that he thould be the caufe of fo many poore widdowes on a fuddaine; buche fwore by his maker, no, he was joyfull to fee what power his Impeshad, and to likewife confelled many other milchiefes. and had a charme to keep him out of Goale, and hanging, as he paraphrased it himselfe, but therein the Devill deceived him; for he was hanged, that Michaelmas time 1645. at Burie Saint I dmunde, but he made a very fare larger confession, which I have heard hath been printed ; but if it were fo, it was neither of bir. Hophins doing, nor mine owne ; for we never printed any thing untill now. I doe this (he being dead) but make no use of any confellions taken by him, but only this, for that it fal-leth out fo fit for this purpofe : Yet I have heard, that other confellions have been printed, and fome other things belides, as if it had been of ours, or one of our doings, or at leaft, by one of our confents; v hen as I know, he never had any hand in any, and for my part latterly renounce all farmer. Alfo I may adda to A Confirmation and Difeovery of Witcheraft. 25

rothis, one Henry Carre of Karleden, in Suffolke, who I have heard was a Scholler fit tor Cambridge, (if not a Cambridge Scholler) and was well educated; yet fell into this grievous finne, and confelled, that he had two linnes, which fucked on thole markes I found upon him, two vecres together, and came in the likeneffe of Mice, which he felt oft, and faid, they were hairy and heavie, and to feeming to bewaile hiscondition, faid, that he had forfaken God, and Godhim, and therefore would confesse no more, he faid, untill he came on the Gallowes to be hanged, for he had confelled enough for that, and then he would confesse all, and make all other knowne he knew of but in the meane time, he would confeile no more, nor did, vet he was much importuned to it. but that was alwayes his anfwer, and was arraigned at the Barre, three or foure times, and yet by reason of an Allarum at Cambridge, the Goale delivery at Burie Saint Edmunds was adjourned, for about three weekes, and he died in the Goale in that time : So it was conceived to be pride of heart, which was the first originall cause, by reation of his knowledge; yet I confesse, he fell into poverty before his death, but as for that, I thinke it is feldome or never knowne, that any get effates, or thrive, that thus give themfelves over to Satan, but rather confume their effotes, if they have any : yet the word of God fayes. The wicked man thriveth as well as the godly in this world : But for Witches, I never knew any. To these likewise night be added, those observers of times, Deut. 18 And fuch as professe to cure difeases, by fuch meanes as have no realon, or worke of nature to doe the Cure, nor have by any ordinance of God, from his word, any fuch operation to heale the infirmity. And therefore fuch remedies must be Diabolicall. & the practifers either Witches already, or by their implicit faith, the next doore to Witchchraft. Such be they that use Spells, Charmes, and fuch like; and what be Juglers and legerdemain Companions? For that they fport with fuch refemblances, and utter words, as the invocating of a Spirit, the reality whereof, is called an abomination before God, and as Saint Paul fy caketh, Children of difobedience. What be the Fortune tellers, and fuch like ? but apt to be Satans flaves in Witchery, as they be + is otherwife in impiety; For through cutiofity of knowledge, it realon and Art faile, will it not move men to feeke help of a Stirir.

26 A Confirmation and difcovery of Witchcraft.

rit, who is ready at hand to attend, to draw them into the pit of Magick, and Sorcery, and Witchchraft ? as one Mr. Cooper speaketh of, in hisbooke, called, The Mystery of Witcheraft, Whoni himtelfe was delivered from, by Gods preventing grace; but becauje as yet, these have not been to commonly found out now adayes, I forbeare further, though I might inftance diverfe examples more. Those who with greedinelle gape after worldly wealth, or feare poverty. As Meribell Bedford of Railesden aforelaid confeffed, that above fix yeares before the was found with the markes, which Witches ufually have, There came a black thing to her, and called Meribell, which asked her to denie God, and Chrift, and told her, if the would, the thould never want, but should bee avenged of all her enemies, which the confented to: then the faid, he had bloud of one of her little fingers, to seale the Covenant, which being done, the faid, foure more came, One like a Dows called Tib; One like a Miller called Tom; One like a Spider, or a Spinner called Joane; and the other like a Waspe called Nann; These she confessed were at her command, to performe the Covenant, and did fuck upon those markes found upon her body, two or three times a week, during the faid fix yeares, and did much harme, as the freely confested with much penitency. To this I may adde, one Elizabeth Hubbard, widdow, of Stow Market in Suffolke, who confessed, that above thirty yeares, the had three things came to her in the likeneffe of Children, which asked her whilpering to deny God, Chrift, and all his workes, and to cleave to them, and the thould want nothing; Thefe the faid, as they named them felves, were called, Thomas, Richard, and Hobb, and that they foratched her back, and fetchedbloud to feale the Covenant, and that they use to fuck on those markes which were found upon her, two or three times a week, about breake of the day, and that the did fay, I pray to God to doe to him as he dealt by me (meaning a man of the fame Towne) and he languithed and died, and many other things the faid the did, but was afhamed to tell them. Alice the wife of Edmund Wright of Hitcham, in Suffolke, confessed that the had foure impes above threefcore yeares ; two like little Boyes; onelike a Lambe, and the fourth like a gray Buzzard, and that the biggeft boy fpoke to her with a great whorce voyce, as if he had been griev'd, and asked her to goe into the field, and fhe

the thould have money, and thould never milfe or want any thing, and asked her to deny God, and Chrift, and to curfe God two or three times, and that the tooke her elder brother with her, and went into the field, but when they came to the place where they appointed her to goe, they found none, and that the ules often to be in paine and trouble, after they had nipped or fucked her, where her markes were found, sometimes once a week, sometimes once a fortnight, and that the felt on them, and that they were foft, and that they came fometimes ieverally, fometimes altogether, and that they often asked her to goe and doe milchief. which the confelled, to fome Cattell of her Neighbours, and faid, that the was much troubled and tormented, and in extreame paine, which they have put her to for denying their demands. Furthermore, Joane Ruce ulver of Powftead in Suffolke, confessed, that in the field called Horfecroft or Hog-Marfh, there appeared in a bush things like Chickens, about five or fix, and that she catched three of them and the reft ranne away, and that fhe carried three home, which foone after turned to the likeneffe of Mice, whole names the called Touch, Pluck, and Take, which spoke to her with a great hollow voyce, and asked her to denie God, and Chrift, and told her, if the would, the thould never want meat, drinke, or clothes, or money, but she faid she told then, that if the denied God and Chrift, the thould lofe her foule, but the faid, they told her againe, they were more able to fave her foule then God, and that they would doe more for her then she thought for, if she would confent to them, which then fhe confessed fhe did, and then they demanded bloud, and the nipped her fore-finger, and they pricked her finger with a pin, and there dropped fix drops of bloud which they catched, and fo had it againe after the fame manner thrice, and that fhe did agree to give them her foule; Then I asked her whether they brought her any money or no, and the faid, fometimes foure thillings at a time, and fometimes fix shillings at a time, but that is but feldome, for I never knew any that had any money before, except of Clarkes wife of Manningtree, who confelled the fame, and shewed some which she faid her Impe brought her, which was perfect money : But this Ruce, further confelled the fucking of her markes, and how the fent her Impe Touch to kill a Bullock, and that he came back againe, and told her he had fluck it on the E right right fide, and it died accordingly, and fo many other things, and faid the was flopped and could not confette when the would, but after had eafe. Here you may observe, that if he cannot prevaile for-want, then he promifes to free them of hell torments, and to delude them that way. As he did Ellen the wife of Nicholas Greenliefe of Barton, in Suffolke, who confelled that three things came to her; one like a Rat, cold and ragged as the felt on him; The next like a Mole, foft and cold; The third like a Moule; and that the Mole spoke to her with a great hollow voyce, and asked her to give her foule and body to him, for he could fave her, and bad her not be afraid of him, for he could performe what he promifed, whereupon the confented, then he told her the thould never want, but be avenged of all her enemies, and fo should continue her life time, if she did not bewray him, for if fhe did he would have the upper hand of her, and confessed that her wilhes came to paffe; as for example : the wilhed one goodman Garnebam might be lame, and to he was, and that Master Lockweed might have Lice, because he formerly accused her for fending, or causing him to have some when the did it not, and to he had, and that her Impestifed to fuck her two or three times a week, for nineteene yeares together ; And that the Mole faid the thould be questioned in some short time, but advised her to stand out and not to confesse, for if she did he would cause her to drowne her felfe, or put her felfe to death, and then he should have her foule, and after when the was kept, before the went to the Justices of Peace, her Impe in the shape of a Mole came to her, when those which were with her faw it not, and tore her as the confessed, as if he would have torne her in pleces, because the had confessed. This woman also confessed, that when she prayed the prayed to the Devill and not to God, and that the had her Impes from her mother in Law, who the faid spoiled her; And further confessed that the Devill had the use of her body, and used to come to bed to her, but was fost, cold, and heavier, so heavie as the could not speake, And that her linpe like a Rat went upon her, withing to lame Ralph Roggards Horfe or Mare, because he faid he would goe for the Searchers, and fo it was. Belides the former markes know this, that it is more ealier to finde them on the breft then in any other place, for that the breft is all fhrunke up, and the Teate thereof extended longer then then any womans that gives fuck, be it on man or woman, with a Circkle round about it asif it were fucked, and infentible as aforefaid, and if on a woman that gives fuck, that brelt is drye, for where the Impes fuck there will come no milke, but the teate will flick out longer there then the other, and is nothing but skinne, and will be much extended as aforefaid, and eatily to bee difcerned by feeling of it. I should thinke this should give all fatisfaction; that gaine, Revenge, feare of want, or poverty, or fearefulnelfe of hell torments, or ill parents, or company, yea and luft alfo, or any one may bee a meanes to draw one to Witchchraft.

As for ill company, bad and wicked parents, and fuch as are over-much given to luft, I will put them together, and inftance some few more examples ; As one Bush of Barton aforesaid widdow, confessed that about three weekes after her husbands deceafe, being above fiteene yeares before the was quettioned, the Devill appeared to her in the shape of a young black man, standing by her bed lide, which spoke to her with a hollow voyce, and came into bed to her, and had the ule of her body, and asked her to deny God and Christ, and serve him, and then she should never want, but should be avenged of all her enemies, which she confented to, then she faid he killed her and asked her for bloud, which he drew out of her mouth, and it dropped on a paper, and that he us'd to have the use of her body two or three times a weeke, and then us'd to kiffe her, and at no other time but as beforefaid, but she faid he was colder then man, and heavier, and could not performe nature as man, and that foone after she had confented to the Covenant and given her bloud, there came two things more like Mice, which uled to fuck her about twice a week during that time, and confeffed how the fent an Impe to torment a Maiden, who she thought was against her having reliefe at her Masters, which was done, but afterward this Maiden went to her and fcratched her till she got bloud of her, and then she confeffed she had no further power over her (but this is not alwayes true, nor to be observed, though it tooke effect there) But she confelled the killing of three and twenty Turkies at one time, and Cowes, and how her Impes returned and told her it was done, and other things then at large. One more which I should thinke should be a warning to others, to have a care to E 2 bring bring their Children up in the nurture and feare of God. Of one Anne Cricke of Hitcham aforefaid widdow, that the had three linpes about leven yeares together; The one in the like selfe of a Sparrow called Harrie; the other two in the likeneffe of reddifth dunne Mice, called Jack and Will, and they fucked her twice a weeke feverally, all in one night, and the Devill fetched bloud on her left Arme to feale the Covenant, which was to denie God and Christ, and to serve him, which she faid the promiled faintly, but confessed the promile was first made by her, before the Devill had her bloud; Then I asked her if she did grieve for it after she had done it, she answered, when it was done it was too late to repent; then lasked her why she did it, she faid she was left weake, and the Devill got the upper hand of her for want of faith, through want and otherwife, she also confessed the Devill had the use of her body, but she faid she could not tell whether he performed nature or not, and faid she could not confesse before much company, but said the Devill spoke in a hollow voyce, and confelled the imployment of her impes, as the fending of her Impe Harry to John Leveristes of the same Towne, to kill him a Hog, because she was denyed Egges and such like things, and they burnt his eares, and she could not keepe from going; it being asked her why she went, she faid they mnst needs goe the Devill drives, and fo many fuch like things. Alfo Sulan Scot of Lauenham aforefaid, complained of one Sweeting comming to her with one Golding, who confelled the Devill us'd to have the use of her body, and spoke to her with a great easie voyce, and that she had two Impes like Cats and Dogs, which fucked on those markes found upon her, and how she was the Death of Thomazine, the daughter of one Mr. Coppinger there. and diverse other things. Also one Richmond, a woman which lived at Brampford, confessed the Devill appeared to her in the likeueffe of a man, called Daniel the Prophet, who bad her not be afraid of him, for he was fo, and tooke her by the hand, and bad her truft in him and he would avenge her of all her enemies. and he should mille nothing, for he would curfe her enemies, and that she after falling out with her neighbour, curfed her and bad the Devill take her, and she dyed after she had lyen fome eight weekes, as the faid, by her meanes, becaufe the Devill promifed her revenge ; the confessed her Covenant was to deny God, Chrift and

and his Minifters, and to ferve him, the faid the Devill, for the faid fo he was that the called Daniel the Prov het, none shall neea question it ; and she contessed she had thice more, One like a rugg red brinded Dog with cloven feet, One like a Hog called Tack, and another like a Dog called James, and confelfed the Devill defired her to use curting, and whatloever the defired thould come to her, and to confessed many things the did. Alfo Anne Goodfellow of Woodford, in Northamptonshire widdow, confessed that soone after her Aunts decease, about three yeares before she was questioned, the Devill in the shape of a white Cat appeared to her, and spoke to her with a low voyce, and bad her not be afraid of it, for he was her Aunts spirit, and asked her to deny God, Chrift and her Baptisme, which she laid she did, for he promiled her that she should be faved, and would doe for her what she defired, and then asked her for bloud to feale the Covenant, and she further confelled that he bit her on the fecond finger, and got bloud into his mouth, but what he did with all she knew not, but faid amongst other things that she found him a lver, for she often wanted after. Allo Elizabeth Gurrey of Rifden, in Bedfordsbire Widdow, confessed that the Devill had the use of her body, and lay heavie upon her, and that through her wilfulneffe, and poverty, with delire of revenge, she denied God, and Chrift, and fealed it with her bloud, about five or feven yeares before she was found with the markes, and confelled what the had done to one William Dickens, and another there, and the manner how, but afterward I heard she made a very large confellion. Anne Hammer neere Needham in Suffolke, of Creeting there (as I remember) confessed that soone after her mothers decease, which was above twenty yeares before she was questioned. there came two Impes to her, which she called Tom, Robbin, and Tom like a Mole, and Robbin like a Dorr, which she fent to kill Mr. Campe a child, which she faid did (very like to be true,) for Malter Campe averred that a Mole to their thinking was feen in the houfe, going towards the roome where the child lay, and that they had much adoe to keep it out, nor could tell what became of it in the end, and that they used to fuck her twice a fortnight on those markes found upon her, during that time, and that the Devill in the likeneffe of a Calfe asked her to denie God. and Chrift, and to ferve him as Lord, and told her that if she would would he would free her of hell torments, and that she should never want any thing, but be faved, and she confented, then he told her he would avenge her of her enemies, but she faid the Devill never performed any thing but revenge, and that the Devill in the likenesse of a black man us'd to come in at the key hole, and to bed to her, and have the uly of herbody, but was heavier and colder, and lay allo ver her as man, and us'd not to speake but onely to aske to lie with her, and as she thought performed nature : But if I should goe to pen all of these forts, then Ishould have no end, or at least too big a volume, and therefore but this one more ; that Anne Borcham of Sudbury, in the County of Suffolke widdow, confessed that as she awoke out of a dreame she faw uglie men (as she thought) a fighting, and asked them why they fought, who answered that they would fight for all her, and then one vanished away, and then came to her into bed and had the use of her body, but faid he was heavier and colder then man, and lay onely on part of her, and that man asked her to deny God and Chrift, and to ferve him, but she faid she told him she was a poore widdow, and then he faid if she woud ferve him she should never want, but have her defire, and then she confented, for he promised her to free her of hell torments, yet she faid he told her she mult goe to hell, but should not be tormented (a fearefull and fubtill delulion) for I have been with fome who have confeffed the fame, and that he promiled them that they should onely walke too and fro the earth as their impes did, and never fuffer or feele torments. Now fome may fay, if all these forts be Witches, then most part of the world be fo. lantwer no; for honest perfons may bee given to these, and yet free from Witchcraft; But this is onely to shew when any are given to be extreame in any of these, then is the Devill bulie to worke upon them, for he doth not upon all that be given to these wayes, but upon such as the findes some kinde of preparednesse in, as for example, Was there not a preparednesse In Boneham, and Mr. Parlon Lowis, and fo if you doe but truly observe little or more in all their confessions, as take but this last when she faw that fight of fighting (as she thought) would not a good Christian have had her thoughts upon God, rather then to have fuffered one to come to bed to her, which she knew could be no leffe but th. Devill, and no man, for then he could not

not have come into the roome, for Satan appeareth net to them in any shape untill he finde some preparednesse, and then as you have heard by these confessions path he apperes in feverall thapes, and then maketh the league, and confirmes it with bloud, and then fends them Familiars more or leffe, and fo proceedes by degrees : So you may finde as I faid before, extreme poverty, pallionate forrow accompanied with folitarineffe, too much inraged with anger and defire of revenge, those of fuch parents', and all that I have formerly reckoned; you fee by their confellions, that the extreame makes a preparedneffe, and I have heard of fome schollers for want of Learning, to be learned have growne to it, and some through overmuch, as is instanced before. Likewife John Scarfe of Ratlesden aforesaid, confessed that about three yeares before he was acculed to be fearched, there came a thing into his house of a gray colour, of the bignesse of a great Rat, of about a quarter of an ell long, which he cooke up and put into a box, and kept it iome certaine time there, and then tooke it out, and laid it downe on his belly, and put it to the place where the markes were found, where he faid it fucked halfe an houre; (Did he prepare himfelfe, or was he defirous to be one?) I conceive he did delire to be one, for he was a heathenish man, and fo the sgreement paft; but to thew his willingneffe to put it to the place, for in his confellion more at large, he confelled that within a fortnight after there came two more, of a whitilh dunne colour, and leffe then the other, which he called Tom, and Will; but the first he called Harrie, and so proceeded. Now I will proceed to prove that Witches may be found out.

First, from God in the giving of his Law against Witches. Excd. 21.18. Thou shalt not suffer a Witch to live, which implyeth a Discovery of them, else it could never be put in execution, and should be a Law 10 no purpose.

Secondly from the Hiftory, First Divine. For it is faid Saul found out Witches, and executed the Law upon them, or put, them to death, and so good King Jossab, 2 King. 3. 14.

Secondly, we have Chronicles, and many relations made of the evident difcourfe of Witches.

Thirdly, the many Tryalls in our owne Country at many Affizes: So it is cleere that Witches may be difcovered, though it cannot be denyed but that there is fome difficulty therein, becaule cause the secretie of the grounds of Witchcraft is so close and hidden, as being one of the greatelt workes of darkneffe committed this day under the Sunne: for that naturall caufes may arife very ftrong, and many may cunningly counterfet outward appearances, and Witnelles may feigne their acculations out of malice. being transported with rage and uncharitablenesse, and defire of revenge, becaufe of the ftrange imagination they have through many feeming probabilities; Some for words, or deeds, taken in the worlt fenfe; Some upon some suddaine light of some creature, and fo likewife upon burning any thing of the party fufpected to be bewitched, if any (hall come (though peradventure accidentally) and (o fometimes fomething elfe, as thatch over the doore or fuch like of the parties fuspected to be a Witch, and fo I could reckon divers inflances of feverall wayes, which many times have produced strange and sometimes true effects, which meanes have partly been the caule of the questioning of many. who have been found no leffe then Witches, and have fuffered fince the aforementioned time : but I forbeare to fpeake any further of those wayes, for I conceive them to be unlawfull altogether, and not to be used, for it cannot be conceived any lesse then a distrust in Gods providence, in putting confidence that fuch meanes will make the Witch knowne, and effect their defires: Yet to proceed as I have faid, I cannot deny but those may be just grounds of fuspicion, and cause of questioning them, but not alwayes certaine, besides the unlawfulnesse held by Divines. But these cannot be denyed to be just grounds as aforefaid. As when one thall be given to curfing and banning, with imprecations upon flight occasion, and withall use threatnings to be revenged, and thereupon evill to happen. As Cherrie of Thrapfton. in Northampton (hire, a very aged man, who upon a fniall occasion, of falling out with one of his Neighbours in the field, where they kept Cattell, one of the two (I doe not now well remember which) (cared fom: Cattell off the ground, where the Cattell the other kept was to goe, with a Dog; the faid Cherrie and the other fell at odds and worded, whereupon Cherrie wilhed that his tongue might rot out of his head, the man was foone after strangely taken, and his tongue did come out of his month. hanging onely by the rootes thereof within his mouth , but could not be kept all in his mouth, and fo continued to his death. and

and died in a milerable condition. This Cherrie confelled himfelt, and that he was his death, onely upon that occation. After which Confellion, that it came to be known, many of the townlmen of Thrapflone aforefaid averred that he died with his tongue out, and that in a manner it rotted. A fearful thing to be thought of, what a milerable condition the poor man died in.

Cherrie likewife confessed the death of two more, which by his confession, and those that knew their deaths, died in a strange and miserable condition, through his wicked cursing (as he confession of the factor of the factor of the factor of the factor And being asked whether he did not do Sir John Washington, a Knight which lived in the same town, any harm in his cattel or otherwise, for that he had suffered strange losses, he confessed he did, and particularized the death of much cattel; saying, when he had reckoned up as many as he could well remember. That he had been the death of some of his, that he could not reekon them all.

Then it was demanded of him, Why he would offer it to Sir John, who had been fo loving to him in affording him relief contlantly. He anfwered; The more he gave him, the more power he had over him to do him mifchief: for he faid his lmps must be employed, elfe they would not let him be quiet, but torment him.

This Cherrie also confessed divers other things and harms he had done, and the fealing of the Covenant with the devil with his blood, to deny God and Christ, and to serve him the devil for revenge, with promise of freedom from hell-torments : and that his lmps, the last time they sucked him, not long before he was fearched, told him they would not suck him any more but that time, because he was an old man, and had but little blood.

This Cherrie confessed presently after he was searched, who died at Northampton in the Goal there, the same day he should have beed tried, much about the time the Grand Jury had found the Bill of Indictment against him, Billa vera, as it was reported, miserably. A just judgement of God : for it was reported, that a night or two before, his coat was all rent right down on the back', and his mouth stopped full : and when it was pulled out, he confessed that he had been at a bridge going into Thrapston town, and had a cord found about his neck.

To this I might adde the aforenamed Thomazin Barcliff, who upon the falling out with another woman about the death of a childe, bade her go home and look to the reft, left the loft more. And one died fuddenly after, as before is expressed.

Of these kindes I could nominate divers more, as you may obferve in many of their Confessions, and might adde implicite confeffions : As, when a queffion is asked the fulpected party, If he or the were not the caule of fuch or fuch a thing ; answer is made, He or the might have let me alone, or not done to and to; or fuch like. As for example, you may observe in molt of their Confessions, they did it becaule they had not, luch things as they defired, or used to have : as Anne Leech of Hawford in Esfex confessed in her Confession, besides the death of two or three, the laming of a childe of one Turners. It being asked her why the did it, the anfwered, Her mother might have paid her for work the had done. Likewise onc Anne Parker, being asked why fhe did one Pryer mischief; she answered, He might have given her money upon a Thanksgiving-day, as well as he gave to others ; but would not give her any, because she was not at Church : whereupon she sent her foirit to him, who did accordingly. And fo confessed how the devil in the likeneffe of a dun Dog, had three drops of blood under her tongue, to feal the Covenant; and had a piece of paper in his hand, and wrote her name thereon with her confent, and fo promised her money, and that she should never want, but should be avenged of her enemies, according as is expressed in others.

Hereto I might adde fuch as faid they have fuch things as Familiars fuck on them, but cannot help it. Alexander Suffums of Melford in Suffolk, confeffed that he had things which did draw those marks I found upon him; but faid he could not help it, for that all his kinred were naught. Then I asked him how it was possible they could fuck without his confent. He faid he did confent to that. Then I asked him again why he should do it, when as God was so merciful towards him, as I then told him of, being a man whom I had been formerly acquainted withal, as having lived in Town. He answered again, He could not help it, for that all his generation was naught; and so told me his mother and aunt were hanged, his grandmother burnt for Witchcraft, and so others of them questioned and hanged. This man is yet living, notwithstanding he confessed the solution of solutions above interesting the solution of the solutions above fixteen yeers together, but was fulpected for doing of mifchief, yet never queffioned, but as he came into a house accidentally where I was, and fo profered himfelf to be fearched, and prefently confeffed thefe particulars, and fo by that means brought to trial, but freed, and living, as atorefaid.

Likewife I may adde, When the party suffected makes enquiry after the party taken sick, or defires to visit the party, or the party the suffected : For many have confessed that after they have done a thing, they are forry for it, but cannot help it; as King of Acton in Suffolk confessed, to a woman whom he had bewitched, in the time she was in her extremity, long before he was questioned: but this woman defired him to undo what he had done; and he told her he could not undo what he had done, but told her he was forry for it, and told her of another that could, as he faid, and as the affirmed, that was one, as we untruly call them, White or good Witches, and one that was then sufficiently who accordingly did it.

To confirm this, I can tell you of a very remarkable example much tending to this particular, of one at Heddenham in the Ille of Elv in the County of Cambridge, where a childe fuspected to be bewitched, was carried to the Justice of Peace his house, where the party fuspected was to be carried to be examined. This childe being very fick, was fet in a chair, and held in it; but as foon as the party who was suspected came in, on a sudden it arose of it self. and got hold of her face to scratch her, 'as its ftrength would afford, the not ftirring. Here you may observe the former Confesfions, where the Witch confessed, that after the was foratched, the had no further power over that party; for this woman flood fill: and fo you may perceive that many of them, after they have done mischiefs, are forry for it, and cannot help it : (This it is to renounce God and Christ) for this woman presently confessed that it was the that had hurt the childe, through her diabolical practice, and told him what Imp fhe had fent to hurt the childe, and the occasion why she did it; and how she had sent one of her Imps a little before the was accused, (for the had been fearched, and found with the marks) to defiroy or spoil a whole field of corn in that Parifb ; and fo made a very large Confession, with the fuckling of her Imps upon those marks found upon her, and the Covenant fealed with her blood, (as aforefaid in other Confessions) besides F 2 other

other mischiefs which she did. May not Spell-fetters and Charmers be alfo added ? for I cannot conceive any leffe, when they shall fay that by words they can charm, fet Spells, and help or cure mad Dogs, or any thing bitten by them, and fuch-like ; though it be by their implicite league, (as some of them do) yet it is a distrust of Gods providence, putting their confidence in their words, rather then in the living God, who faith it is an abomination to him. And I have heard iome of these, not long fince, boaft of their doings therein, faying they had it from their parents, and were not their parents good Christians ? and they do but use the words for good ends. So likewife of those born of ill parents, if their carriage be not otherwife; as I have inftanced enough of those, else l could instance more, as the aforenamed Rebecca West. who was drawn to it by her mother, (as the confetted) after a flrange manner, as the faid : for her mother asked her to go to Manningtree with her, which was about a mile, and bade her work hard that the might go: and as they went, the told her the must not fay any thing what sever she faw, but confent to them. and do as they did, and then the thould be a happie woman; or fuch-like inticements. But when she came there, at the house where her mother went, there were her confederates met ; then, before the could be entertained, her mother was asked whether her daughter was acquainted with the matter in hand; who answered She was. Then the was entertained; and as the confetted, the devil appeared, and first kiffed the woman of the house, and so one after another, and at last her self; and so she was asked then if she were willing to be entred into their fociety ; who faid, She was. Then appeared Familiars, which the confelled, alfo the fucking of her body on the marks, and the fealing of the Covenant with her blood. This young woman confelled the naming of their Imps, and the manner, which I am afhamed to expresse; and the initiation of a Witch, and every particular thing at large; especially, the confessed how the devil took her by the hand, and the manner and words were used at her Marriage, when the was married to the devil (as the confetted :) a fearful thing to declare. But one thing observe, That the devil imitates God in all things as he can, much after the book of Common-prayer, then in his outward Worthip. She likewife confeffed that her mother prayed confiantly, (and, as. the world thought, very ferioully) but the faid it was to the devil, ufing using these words, Ob my God, my God, meaning him, and not the LOR D. This I put in the rather, because you may take notice, where fuch meetings be, there are just grounds of fuspicion : for they cannot always do their milchiefs according to their defires. without their meetings, and the help one of another.

I might adde the apparition of the party suspected to the party fick, and could nominate some instances thereof, as in Northampton-shire, and elsewhere : but because apparitions may proceed from the phantalie of fuch as the party ule to fear, or at least fulpect, I forbear, because I would not that any should be accused, but where there are just grounds of suspicion. But those called Wifemen, or Wife-women, called your White Witches, which will fhew . the other in glaffes, or undo what the other have done, fif proved) is it not sufficient?

But I hope there it none fo ignorant or blinde, as to think or believe it is lawful for any to go or fend to fuch, much leffe to put any confidence or truft in them, who require faith to believe they can cure, before they will undertake it; feeing by the Law of God they ought to die, as well as the other. And the holy Scripture utterly forbids any going to them, Levit. 2. 6. where it is faid, that he will let his face against such as shall leek after those that have familiar (pirits, and will cut them off from among it his people; much more then fuch as fhould be guilty themselves.

Then some will say, How shall they be known one from another, or how shall they be found out, if these difficulties be ? For it cannot be denied but that many of them have made great thews of Religion.

l answer, It is truth : as the devil can transform himself into an Angel of light, fo have many of these Witches made outward fhews, as if they had been Saints on earth, and fo were taken by some; as one of Catworth in Huntingtonshire, who made as large a Confession, in a manner, as ever any did, & confessed at the gallows before her death, in my hearing. Likewise one Lendall of Cambridge, who luffered alfo, carried her felf as if the had been no leffe: and fo did the mother of the faid Rebecca Weft, and many others, which by their carriage feemed to be very religious people; and would constantly repair to all Sermons neer them : yet notwithflanding all their fhews of religion, there appeared fome of thefe probabilities, whereby they were sufpected, and so fearched, and so F 3 by

by that means discovered and made known. For if you do but observe these and such-like other reasons as may be thereby gathered, together with their Confessions, you shall finde that they prepare themselves in some kinde or other, and that by their outward carriage, either by ill company keeping, maliciousnesse, revengeful perfons, or fuch as be born of fuch parents, or go under a general fulpicion of Witchcraft, or one way or other as aforefaid, there will appear just grounds of fuspicion, either by words or deeds, whereby they may be brought to be questioned, whereby it may appear there is a league made with the devil : for notwithstanding all former reasons, to convict or prove one guilty of Witchcraft, is to prove a League made with the devil; in this onely act, standeth the very reality of a Witch ; without which, (notwithstanding great shews of probabilities) I know not, nor cannot conceive how any can be properly faid to be Witches : For the devil (through Gods permission.) may hurt mens bodies, and kill their cattel ; and ill haps may fall out upon his or her curfing, and but grounds to make enquiry and fearch. which must be for this League ; which though never fo fecretly made, yet it is to be difcerned, feeing it is that which maketh a Witch, and not to fome of their own fociety : For befides the former reasons, it is an heathenish practice to seek to such, Isa. 19. 3. and 65.4. 2 King 17.17. Now we fhould not be like the abominable heathen in any evil, much lesse in these abominations. And they which feek to them, are commonly wicked and evil people, haunted themfelves by an evil fpirit, who fuggesteth this course into them, as he did into Saul, 1 Sam.28. Yea, such as efteem of these, and think they work in Gods Name, and by his power, are bewitched in fo thinking, A&s 8.9,11. For it is found true by daily experience amonght our felves, that those which most use them, most need them, as I might instance ; but onely I defire to prove the League, which is to be proved : for they that make this League, if expresse as before, have a familiar or spirit, more or leffe : For as foon as the League is made, the Spirit or Familiar, one or more, is familiar, as was before fufficiently proved by Saul and Josiab in the forementioned places, when Witches were known to have Familiars, belides the Confessions of Witches lately executed herein expressed, and fo they have now adays; by which, after their League made, they work their milchief, as is likewife proved proved by their Confessions; as the faid Elizabeth Clark confessed, who averred that all were Witches who had fuch marks as the was found withal, and had familiar fpirits more or leffe; and that there were fome which had none; which I have found true; for they have onely the brand, or devils mark, as I may fo call it : but for the other, you may observe it as a genetal rule in all their Confellions; as John Bylack, alias Gleede, of Waldingfield magna in the County of Suffolk.confeffed that the devil came in at his window in the thape of a rugged fandy-coloured dog, which asked him to deny God, Chrilt, and his Baptisn, which he spake with a great hollow voice; and he confented. Then he faid Satan asked him for blood to feal and confirm the cover ant or agreement; and he bade him take it; and that Satan with his confent had, in the shape of fuch a coloured dog, thorow his leather doublet, with his claw. Then I asked him whereaway Satan had it : and he faid, From his heart; and that Satan promifed to free him of hellcorments, and that he would fend him other things which he must let fuck his blood, and they fhould avenge him of all his enemies. All which he faid he confented to, and was willing withal; and then foon after those came, which he called his Imps, and fucked on those marks or teats which I found on his body, neer twenty yeers together, sometimes once a week, sometimes once a fortnight, which he confessed came in the likenesse of Snails, onely they differed one from another in colour and bigneffe. Then I asked him how they could fuck on that part of his body I found the marks on : and he faid he used to lie down on his right fide to let them fuck, and was willing withal : for he confeffed he oftentimes arole out of his bed, and made a fire, and lay down by it to let them fuck his blood; which rifing out of his bed, and fire making, his wife averred to be truth ; yet the faid the never knew or thought him to be fuch a manner of perfon; for the faid he used to tell her he was fick, and used to be troubled with a difease which he could not help himself better for to ease himself of Kis pain he used to be in, then by that means, and could not endure his bed, his pain was fo troublefome. But to clear all fuspicion which after might fall on her thereby, the was fearched, and found clear, and no leffe thought to be by her neighbours before and fince, as I have heard. He likewise confessed his Imps names were Sydrake, Leffry, Peter, Ayleward, Sacar, and Pyman; for he had fix fix by his confession, and no less by the number of his marks. The first was to kill all manner of fowls, which was the first he confession of the employed. The fecond was to kill sheep and such-like cattel. The third, hogs, and such-like. The fourth, Cows, and such-like beasts. The fifth, all manner of horses. And the lixth, Christians: and so particularized many mischiefs he had done.

So they have their Familiars, some for one thing, and some for another; fome to help them at their needs, (though many times therein they fail them) and others to work their milchiefs and revenge, as the aforefaid John Wynnicke and many others have confessed. But I onely instance their Confessions in short, and but in part onely, tending to that I quote them for as neer as I can: For I could adde divers more to this, but many of the other in effect tend to prove this; fo do most of the Confessions little or more depend one upon another : fo that I do but instance part of them and of the effect of them, and not the third part of those I have ; for if I flould, I have many larger Confessions, which perchance might give better satissaction to some : but I onely aim at the principal heads, and to clear and make it appear, that what hath been done, hath been in a legal way, and not unjuftly, as mady have furmiled, but for the good of the Common-wealth, and I doubt not but agreeable to the Word of God. And that all that be thus in league, (as expresse or open league as aforefaid) are to be found out and known by these evidences, be they of either fort, bad, or white or good Witches fo called; firsh, by Witches marks, which are most commonly upon those baser forts called the bad and curling Witch; and fo upon the other called the good or white Witch, though not fo eafily found, (if but onely the brand, or devils mark, as it may well be termed) but the other, which the spirits suck of, are easily to be diffinguished and known from all the other marks, but yet have as before (if an expressed league.)

This is not to be doubted of; it is the devils cuftom to mark his: God will have his mark for his, Ezek. 9. Rev. 7. the Beaft will have his mark, Rev. 13. So the devil himfelf will have his mark, as you may fee as well by the relations and confeffions of Witches, as alfo the witneffes of many learned men, writing of Witches and Witchcraft. Therefore, where this mark is, there is a league and familiar fpirits more or leffe; which marks are to be found by fearching. Now

Now fome will fay, How shall they be differed from natural marks?

I answer : First, as for that mark which comes by the sucking or by the drawing of the spirit or familiar, more or leffe, which is most commonly upon the baser fort called the bad witch, and fo many times upon the other fo untruly called the good or white witch, for all witches are bad indeed, though peradventure for the most part they have not commonly fo many Familiars as the other, yet I fay most of them work by Familiais as well as the other, and fuckle them likewife, though not commonly above one. They are to be known by these tokens, as by the infensibleneffe of them, fometimes like a little teat or big, that is when it remains as the Imp or Familiar fucks thereof : if outward, then nothing to be discerned but as a little bit of skin, which may be extended and drawn out, and wrung, much like the finger of a glove, and is very limber, and hath no fubflance in it, except it be when their Imps have newly fucked them, and then it may be there may be a little watrith blood perceived, but may be known from natural marks feveral ways; for it hath no fear, but at the very top a little hole, where the blood cometh out. But if it be inward, then it is beyond all natural marks, or where no fuch-like (if natural) could possibly be, and remains but as a little red spot, much like, or little differing from a flea-bite; onely it is out of the flesh above it, when as the other is flat, but this as I fay is out above it, with a whitilh end at the top, and may be known both of them by a circle about them, much like the circle of a womans breft which hath been fucked, and one may diftern the place where the blood comes out : and many times it falleth out, if new fucked, the watrith blood may be stroaked out, especially in the time they be kept, if the watchers be careful to differn when they be in most trouble, though their Familiars come never to infentible : and therein (as before) watching hath done good (though not deprived of any thing necessary, as before.) And the skin may be pulled one fide from the other, and differeth from the other parts in colour, and remains as if it were a dead place, and fo it is infenfible of pricking and other ulage, if it be done in a direct monner; and fo may be eafily differned from any natural mark otherwife, if this were not fufficient to give fatisfaction, which I doubt not but it will, as I could otherwife express , if it were neither for for giving offence to fome, nor a means to give fome of fuch perfons infight (o far, as thereby they might grow more experienced to make away their marks, for that hath been too common amongft them already; for which I could inflance many examples: but you finde by their Confeilions, that all of them tend to manifelt, that their Familiars fuck upon those marks which we first finde, which are before expressed, and therefore I forbear to inflance any to that particular.

Sometimes they be like a blue fpot, that is, when they make them away, and then no more to be difcerned belides the infenfibleneffe thereof; but will grow or be drawn again by the fucking of their Imps or Familiars more or leffe, for they cannot hide them always : as one Marsh a woman of Brampford confessed, who had been fearched two or three times one after another, and no other marks could be found upon her : at length, the being acculed by another of the fame town, was forthwith before the had any knowledge thereof, or thoughts (as I suppose) of being fearched again, taken by the Constables there in the streets, as she was coming homeward to her own house, and brought to be searched again, upon the others acculation : but as the came by her own house, she defired to go in, (as she faid) to shift her felf, for that the was very unwilling (as the pretended) to go to the women to be fearched with a foul shift on her back : but the Constable having had notice of it formerly, not to fuffer her to go to do it, it being known the did it before her former fearching, brought her forthwith away to the place where the was to be fearched ; and when the was a fearching, the was prefently found to have the marks very apparent, and had a clean Shift on her back. But not long after, in her Confellion, amongst other things, she confessed that if the had been let go home to have thifted her felf, the had not been found with the marks, for that the had a thift to dreffed, that her marks could not have been found at prefent, and that the thereby fo elcaped by the fame means the former fearches; yet the was fearched by those which were the first that ever to my knowledge found any of those marks; and so confessed that she had made a covenant with the devil, and fealed it with her blood, and fet a round O to the paper the devil brought her, and confeffed her Familiars, with the lucking of them, and the milchief the had done by her Witchcraft, or at least part of them, as the then further ther confessed, and suffered for the fame. Here you may observe, that the diligentnesse of searching is a great matter, and one of the chiefelt points of their discovery : For I have observed this one thing in my proceedings herein, that if all their marks, though in feveral places, be not found, they will hardly confesse : but when all are found, and the juit number of them more or leffe laid to their charge, according as they have, it is a great inducement to bring them to confellion; and that hath made me careful when apparent marks have not been seen at first, that a second or third fearch be made : for it is a matter of concernment of life and death; and therefore, as I conceive, it were fitting that those which fearch, and those with them, they having some intelligence of the marks first given them, were fworn before fearching, that diligent fearch might be made in all places of fuch as be suspected in fuch a cale of life and death, for the detection of fo great a height of'fin and impiety, that none that be guilty might escape the punishment due according to their deferts here; and fo those likewise that wrongfully go under that asperlion, be freed thereof. To which end, it were fitting that fuch as did it might be fuch as know what belongs to an Oath, and who make confeience to perform the same likewise ; and such as be at the searching, able people, of diferention and good carriage; for 1 fear that money hath swayed some, and want of knowledge others.

Sometimes the flefh is funk in a hollow, that is, when they pull them off, and pull them out with their nails, or otherwife caufe them to be pulled off; as one of Over in Cambridge-fhire confeffed, it being fo found and laid to her charge, that the heard of our coming to town, and plucked her marks off the night before, becaufe the would not have been found, as the confetted before a Juffice of Peace of the fame town at large, both of the Covenant and her Imps, and the harms the did both to him and others by her Imps.

But fome will fay, It is ftrange they fhould know when they thould be fearched, if it be kept private.

I answer, Let it be kept never so private, it hath been common, and as common as any other thing, as they themselves have confessed : for so did they of Fenny-Drayton in Cambridge-shire, who made very large Confessions, as, that the devil told them of our coming to town, but withal told them they should be G_2 fearched.

fearched, but fhould not be found; wherein they faid they found him a lyar; and fo they faid they did in his promiting them they fhould never want, which they did : and fo likewise that is utual with others; but those made very large Confessions.

Allo fometimes there is nothing to be differned but red fpots, as if the skin were perithed, (and to it is) for that is when they onely cut them off, and apply no medicine at all to it; yet the blood will appear all round within the circle, as afore is expressed. And of these I have found divers ; but for the most part, those have been left for a fecond fearch, or a third, as occasion or ground fufficient required. And of these though I have found divers, yet I have but one example by confellion, and that is of one Clarke of Keyfton in Huntington-Ihire, a young man, who was fo found, and fet at liberty, expecting to have been fearched another time, when he should not know of it; but he soon after confessed he had cut off his marks, faying they were fools that were found with the marks, for he had made fure he could not be found with them, for he had cut off his two or three days before I fearched him. But I perceived the blood, and the wed it to the town fmen, and told them that I thought he was naught, and guilty of that in, and doubted not thereof, but would not take oath, unleffe the marks had been apparently feen upon him.

Now some will say, notwithstanding all this that is faid, There may be and are natural marks like all these afore spoken of.

laniwer, For natural marks, as l conceive, there be Wens of divers forts; but view thefe well, and next adjacent to the flefh they are very finall, and hang like a thred, but from thence like a teat or big; but feel of it, and it is flefhie, and will not extend as the other will do.

But fome will fay, It may be a rent, and fo a piece of skin may hang.

I anfwer, This, though it be nothing but as a skin, yet it cometh firmly out of the flefh, and flicks out like a big or teat, and not hangdown, when I conceive rents will either hang, or lie flat; but if hang, then I believe a fear is to be feen, and feels flefhlike befides: but thefe have no fear, onely as it were a little hole on the top, where the blood comes out, which is eafily to be differed, for I have nipped blood out. And then likewife they be infenfible, when the other be not; But I confeffe, if thefe be not pricked the the right way, they will feel it likewife. Some have Warts : but I anfwer, They be out of the flefh as well as the other, but they are flat and flefhie, and femble, and will not any way extend : but fo far unlike the other, as I will not further fpeak of them. Some have Mouls ; it is truth, I believe moft men have, though they be of feveral colours; but those be flat to the fleth always, which is nothing like the other, nor will extend, but is fensible.

But some will fay, It may be like the brand.

I answer, No : for it differeth as well in colour, as also it hath no circle about it, but is as the reli of the skin is on the other parts of the body, onely differs sometimes in colour, but not like the other, and is sensible : neither for the most part have any of the marks of those which have suffered been found, where there were either Warts, Wens, or Mouls, or commonly rents, especially of the men.

But then fome will fay, There are Eurod-marks, and piles.

I answer, True, but the Emrod-marks are upon the veins, though they iffue out, and are to be differned either by the colour, or by the lying up of the veins ; but if the veins be down, fill, the colour remains in part, and are to be known that way : But however, they will not extend to be drawn out and twilted. as the other will; if at all, I am fure not fo much; and if a little, then it is pain, and the other none: for therein the infenfibleneffe cleers this expressly; for it cannot be conceived that any should be Infenfible upon their veins, and the other are meerly out of the flefh; for I conceive if they were upon the veins, they would bleed after they were fucked, and would not eafily be flenched again; neither be they fo inward as the Emrods marks, except the inward marks, which are beyond them, and where no natural cause can be of that colour, and insensible. And as for the Piles, I think this is a sufficient answer for that likewife; for they be out of the veins, and are sensible without question, and be flat, and will not be extended as the other will.

And then fome others will fay, But women have reads and other mildarriages by childe-bearing.

I aufwei partly as before, and grant it for truth; but yet if that way will neither fear appear, nor will it feel flefhie, but will it be extended as the other; admit all this were truth, I will affirm the colour differs, and that there will be no circle about it, nor twisted.

nor have a hole as the other have, and be infenfible likewife, and otherwife, as I could further explain more at large, if it were fitting: for, All things (as the proverb is) ought not to be fooken at all times, much leffe printed.

But if any shall hereafter make any Objections against me (as l cxpect they will) I will then explain my felf (through permiffion) as far as by experience I have found, or by reading or otherwife my knowledge (hall extend to. For I am confident, and my conficience tells me, that those who shall be found with these marks, are exprelly guilty of that diabolical art or practice of Witchcraft, whether they have done milchief or not, but onely for that they have renounced God and Chrift, and betaken themfelves to the devil, the utter enemy of God and all the world. And I had rather be an inftrument (if any fuch thing ought to be) to fave one who fhould confesse and humble himself, as Manasteb did, then any of thole who, being found with the marks upon them, shall deny : but I shall forbear herein, where it nothing concerns me, but those in authority ; for I would not give offence to any, onely defire to cleer my felf, in giving fatisfaction to the world that my confcience is, that none of these forts ought to live amonghus; for by the Laws of God and the Realm, they ought to die, as it is faid in the 18 of Deuteronomy. And then remember this one place, which is in Micab 5, where it is faid, that when God intends to bleffe a Nation, he will cut off or root out all Witchcrafts and Inchantments : which I should think should give all sufficient satisfaction, that those which have these marks, are in league and covenant with the devil, and that it is not to be doubted but that there are Witches, and that those which have the brand be also guilty as aforefaid, be they of either fort, and are to be found as well as the other, by featching alfo; yet I contelle that is very difficult to be known, and very few ever attained to the difcovery thereof : but it is to be known by the infenfibleneffe thereof, and otherwife, being drawn or fbrunk up fo with a circle about it, as if the skin were firetched to that place, or thrunk up about it; but very little by the colour, for that is as if it were or had been some natural cause, or where some iffue had been, when as the skin was never perithed, as may be eafily difcerred; onely it shews in the middle thereof, for the most part, as if a little hele had been, except it be fuch as the places where the blood blood is fetched to feal the Covenant, which is onely like a natural mark, either long or otherwife, as natural marks be; onely it feemeth to be deader and harder, and fo it is, and not fo tender as other places be, or where plainers have been uled : but the other is for the most part round, but however, it hath a little circle about it, just adjacent to it, as if it were funk in all the circle about, and then within that, next adjacent to the circle, fomewhat higher then the flefh, and harder; and in the middle thereof, a little hole ot pit somewhat sunk. Thisbrand or mark, if it come to be tried for the infensiblenesse, will soon be felt, if greater care be nothad in pricking of it; for though it be infenfible a little way, yet it is not fo deep into the flefh as the others be, but fhews deadlike, much like as if it had been feared with a hot-iron, and is firmly upon the body, and in no fecret place, as the other be, but differs a little in colour as a feared place doth from another ; as I might somewhat inlarge, but I will not prefume too far, left others should unadvisedly and rathly proceed in the discovery of fuch perlons wrongfully, and then fault me for the inlight; as hath been formerly done by fonie, who when they have done that they are not able to give an account of, or render a reason for, or perchance fay those be guilty, where they finde some other evidence may be given that they be guilty, or where money will be largely given that they are guilty, when as if they come to be further questioned, they can onely fay they be fuch marks as fuch a one told me; and fo likewife can fay, I have feen fome have fuch marks in the Jail, of his finding out, or fome who have confeffed; when as they themselves cannot diffinguish between natural marks, and those, neither indeed know them afunder, but however, know but one fort of the marks, and fo let many elcape, and I fear wrongfully thereby, or for lucre, accule ; a fearful thing to be confidered of : And therefore I conceive it were fitting, that when fuch come to their trials in this kinde, it might be done by those of knowledge and differention, and upon good grounds, and not by every light-carriag'd houfwife, who regards more her own ends then the life of a Christian; who can render no other reason, but that they do but what they have learned fome infight in, & to go where they are sent for, or else they would not do it ; indeed for nioney, and not for the Common-wealths good, as may be feen by their want of knowledge therein : For, as I faid, it had need be done done by able, discreet, honest persons, especially for these last mentioned, and upon good grounds, and other cleer evidences concurring with them. Yet I affirm that all that have theie, or any of these marks, are guilty of Witchcraft, if plainly made appear: for I could have spoken somewhat more, both of wrongfully acculing, and exculing, onely I know it will then be judged that I do it to take off all others, and that none, or but luch as I like of, were fitting to do it, and fo thereby take all upon my felf; which I know many in the world will be ready enough to cenfure of me .: But for my part, where one hath the least inlight herein , 1 with there were hundreds in all Countries which had the whole, and more then any now have ; but onely that fuch as be idle, or unconficionable of their ways, and careleffe of men and womens lives, or at least unskilful in these ways, might not be suffered to meddle in such a businesse of concernment of life and death, as this is. As for this, and the lucre of money, I shall more fully clear in the last Objection in the close hereof, to acquit my felf thereof.

Now for the implicite or fecret League, if it be asked what these be which thus work by Satan :

I answer, in some fort, by way of similitude, from the direction of that place in Mark 9. 38, 40. and Luke 9.49. For Satan will be Gods ape in all things what loever he can, and therefore will he allo imitate Chrift herein. They are fuch as invocate the devil by certain superslitious forms of words, and prayers, believing that these means can effect what they have offered them for, and do withal earnestly defire to have them effectual. Now the devil herein confenteth, and affordeth his power, at the utterance of the words to bring the thing to paffe which is defired. Here therefore is a Covenant and inutual confent on both fides : for if a man or woman be content to use superstitious forms of invocation for help in time of need, and in using them defireth in heart to have the thing effected; if the devil work the fcat, there is a fecret compact : for they have defired, and he hath confented. They are fuch as do know, that neither by Gods work in nature, nor by Gods ordination from his Word, the things they do are warrantable, (but rather hear fuch things forbidden) and that they also are absurd to common reason, and yet will do them, because they finde an effect answerable to their expectation.

Hereto

Hereto l might adde the healing of a wound by anointing the inftrument which gave the wound, Spell-fetters, and Charmers, and fuch-like, who many of them are in expressed league as aforefaid : for the devil contenteth himself fometimes, to wit, there where he well perceiveth the party will not be brought to the other, and lets them please themselves with hope of Gods mercy, employing them onely about seeming-good things, for that in so doing they suppose they tin not, nor are in danger of the devil, nor under Gods wrath, as the other are, because they fall not for foully into the pit of definition by an expressed eague, as the others do, and make an outward thew of Religion as well as others.

For what can be faid of those who onely cure difeases by laying on their hands, and using certain words or forms of prayers? Is it not done by this fecret Compact, though ignorantly they think otherwise? For if the remedy be not natural, then it is supernatural; if supernatural, then either from God, and so hath warrant from his Word, and is ordinary, not miraculous; for that work of God hath cealed long fince : or elfe is from the devil, as works wrought by Spells and Charms, and fuch-like, forbidden by God. Yet these forts of persons, finding their practices succesful, are not against Satan, nor can lightly speak ill of his working power, becaule of their fecret and implicite league they have with him, and especially because of the profit they finde come to them thereby. And herein also doth the devil imitate Christ, who allowed fome, which openly as yet did not follow him, to have power to caft out devils, Mark 9, 38, 39. who were not as he faid, against him, nor could lightly speak ill of him, nor of his power, by realon of their secret and implicite faith, and covenant with Chrift; yet did it, because they found successe in it.

So likewife in the Scripture is found the cutting off hair, and burning it, Numb. 6. 18. the writing of words, and the blotting of them out again, and to give them unto one, Numb. 5. 23. Alfo the giving of a portion, Numb. 5. 27. So Satan teacheth his to cut off hair and burn it; as the White-Witch will do to fuch as come to them, advifing them to cut hair, or fuch-like, off the beath they fulpect to be bewitched, and to write a Charm, and to blot it out, and then give it one; alfo to use portions; thus feeming, by these imitations, to have Scripture for their warrant.

And

And to after this manner 1 might reckon up feveral other ways: as, the Lord had fome which by curling and threatning procured evil upon others, 2 Kings 2. 24. Acts 13. To Satan hath fuch, which by curling and threats procure mitchiefs upon others, as you may plainly fee by their Confessions.

Alfo the Lord tied his to certain Rules and Ordinances in his Service, and fometimes to a certain number, Jofh. 6. 15. 1 Kings 17. 21. So Satan tieth his Witches to certain words and deeds in going about his fervice, and to obferve numbers, and to do a thing fo and fo often, three times, feven times, or fuch-like, as the White Witches do: and fo imitate Chrift in many things, as his Affemblies and Sabbaths, Baptifm and Covenants; fo Satan hath all his, after his manner, as Rebecca Weft and Elizabeth Clarke confeffed, as well in these as in other particulars, as you may finde as well by theirs and others Confessions, as alfo by the Writings of learned men who have writ concerning the fame.

And further, as the Lord had fuch as cured dileales by words, by prayers, and did anoint the party infirm; as by fomething brought them from the fick, and carried to the fick again, James 5. Mark 6. 13. Alts 19. 12. So hath Satan fuch as feem by words to cure dileales, by forms of prayers, and by oile; and also by bringing fomething from the fick party, and carrying the fame back again.

So the Lord by his fervants raifed fome from the dead, 1 Kings 17. 21. Acis 9. 40. and likewife Satan maketh flew by his fervants to raife up the dead, 1 Sam.28.

And as the Lord maketh fome to be his, either by his immediate infpiration, and fpeaking to them, or winneth them to him by his influments : fo Satan maketh fome Witches by inward fuggefiions, and his fpeaking to them, or by uling other Witches to gain them to him; as you may finde alfo by their Confeffions. And that as the Lord fpake by a bealt unto a Witch, Numb. 22. 28. fo Satan fpeaketh to Witches, fometimes in one fhape, and fometimes in another.

So likewife, as the Lord ordained Sacrifices to be offered to him, Satan hath taught his to do fo too, Numb.23.

And as the Lord promifed earthly bleffings, to flir up people to ferve him ; fo Satan, as you may finde, is very large in his promifes to fuch as will ferve him, Matth.4.

And fo it is in many other particulars, as might well be obferved. if you do but rightly observe their Confellions, with their carriages, and Satans doings.

But here some will say, Is there no other way to finde them our, but onely by fearching ?

I answer, That is both the most ready and certain way, and fuch a way, as that, if they which undertake it be careful, there can be no millake, especially in those who shall be found to have the marks ; and for the other , if in expressed league, then by the brand; if implicite, then by the aforefaid reafons, and by their Yet they may be found by Witches words alfo, as carriages. when he or fhe hath been heard to call upon their spirits, or to speak to them, or talk of them to any, inticing them to receive fuch Familiars. As some of those of Rattlesden confessed that they had their Familiars from old mother Orvis; fo had Elizabeth Clarke from Anne West, and so had her daughter from her, Anne Clarke from her mother, and her mother from another; fo in many other particulars. As allo, when they have been heard telling of killing of some man or beast, or of the hurting of them ; or when they have not onely threatned revenge upon any or their cattel, but have told particularly what shall happen to such a one, and the fame found true ; and their boaffing afterward thereof. Furthermore, if they have been heard to speak of their transportation from home to certain places of their meetings with others there, as was at Manningtree, Burton, Old, Trilbrook-bushes, and other places.

These and such like, as you may finde by their Confessions, prove a league and familiarity alfo with the devil.

So allo by Witches deeds, as when any have feen them with their spirits, or seen to feed some creatures secretly ; or where the Witch hath put fuch, which may be known by the fmell of the place; for they will flink deteftably, which we have often found true in the time they have been kept, if their Imps or Familiars came to fuck in the mean time, as you may finde they often have. Also when it can be found that they have made pictures ; as I have credibly heard of one of Yarmouth, who fince the aforementioned time suffered there, and confessed that the had made a picture of wax or clay, I do not well remember which, of the proportion of a childe which the was intended to work her mifchief chief against, and had thrust anail in the head thereof, and fo had buried it in a place, which she then confessed; and that as that confumed, so thous the childe, and did, a long time, as I was told by Master Hopkins, who was there, and took her Confession, and went to look for the picture; and that the childe (as I have heard) did foon after mend, and grew lusty again. A hellish invention.

And so many such Witchery-tricks, both of this kinde and otherwife, have thus been lately found out : as, the giving any thing to any man or other creature, which immediately caufed either pains or death; as was at Brampford and other places, as you may also finde by their Confessions. So likewise by laying on their hands, or by some one or more fellow-Witches confelfing their own Witchcraft, and bearing witneffe against others, to as they can make good the truth of their witneffe, and give fufficient proof thereof, as, that they have feen them with their fpirits, or that they have received their fpirits from them, as beforefaid ; or that they can tell when they used their Witcherytricks to do harm, or joyned with them; as those of Manningtree and other places at their meetings used to do : or that they told then what harm they had done, or that they can shew the mark upon them, or fuch-like; or by the Witches confessing of giving their fouls to the devil, and of the spirits which they have, and how they come by them, and the fuckling of them, and fuch other like ways, as you may gather by their Confessions.

All which, notwithstanding, principally depends upon fearching, which is the readiest way to bring them to these Confesfions.

Alfo fome witneffe of God himfelf happening upon the execrable curfes of Witches upon themfelves, praying God to fhew fome token, if they be guilty; who by bitter curfes upon themfelves, think thereby to clear themfelves : as one Binkes of Haverill in Suffolk, who confeffed to me that fhe was guilty, and amongft other things told me, that the Fly which was feen to flie about the chamber, was one of her Imps; but defired to fpeak with one Mafter Faireclotb, who lived not above two miles, or thereabouts, from the Town, being an able Orthodox Divine; who was immediately fent for, and came. This woman, notwithftanding her confeffing to me, denied all to him, wifhing and and defiring withal, that if the were fuch a manner of perfon, that the Lord would thew an example upon her; and that if the had any Imps, that they would come whilt he was there : prefently after, the cries out, A juft judgement of God, they are come indeed, faid the. This Imp, in the fame thape it was feen formerly flying in the room, was feen fattened upon another place of her body, not far from the other matks, but not upon them, and to remained above half a quarter of an hour, till tome women came neer a quarter of a mile, who faw it fattened on her body, the onely crying out to have it pulled off; which at first they were fearful to do; but at length they wiped it off, as they fay, with a cloth; and what became of it after, they knew not; but it had drawn a new mark, like the other.

Was this woman fitting to live, this evidence, with others, being against her, by credible witness? I am fure she was living not long fince, and acquitted upon her trial : for she never confessed any more, but denied what she had formerly confessed.

Here you may take notice, first, that if they have their Familiars come to them either before or after confession, they will not confession to the either time, or deny, and therein watching is of some confequence, till they be examined by a Justice of Peace, or elfe they must expect but few confessions. This was observed as well by those at Bury, as indeed for the most part of all those now lately detected. And secondly, the extreme pain they put them to, especially when they first draw their marks, as most of them generally confession.

And I have observed in the time they have been kept, that if their Imps be a sucking, it is easie to be different and known; for then they will either covet to ruck or sit down upon the ground, or will lie shrinking up all of a heap, making sowre faces, as if they were in extreme pain : so that they may be easily different by their carriage and gestures, whether any thing come to them, or not, while they be kept.

Alfo I have read that a Witch, in fome cafes, hath been brought to a dead party, who hath been fuspected to have been bewitched by that Witch, to touch the dead corps; which was no fooner touched by the Witch, but the corps bled field blood.

These and fuch-like evidences may sometimes, though peradventure not always be given from God, when he is pleased to detect fuch malefactors guilty of blood, as well as in other cafes of murther.

And thus you may plainly fee that Witches may be difcovered, albeit there be fome difficulty therein, and may likewife be brought to confeffe their Witchcraft; as alfo, that there be Witches in thefe our days, nay I rather think more frequent then formerly: for if Satan be fuch a powerful deceiver and feducer, who can make an Eve in Paradile (being in the flate of perfection) to believe him, the devil, before God; can he not (educe now ? Yes certainly, more defperately, to manifeft his bloody malice in thefe later times againft mankinde, and therefore he hath now adays flirred up fuch cruel Witches as be wholly fet upon revenge, tormenting men and women, and their cattel, and making a trade of killing and murdering : of which fort the Scripture hardly gives an inftance, except it be in Balaam, hired to curfe Gods people.

Let us therefore learn to follow the Lord, and hate Witches, Wizzards, Magicians, Soothfayers, Fortune-tellers, Inchanters, jugling companions, and all others that deal in Sorcery and Witchcraft, beholding in them a spectacle of mans misery, as being left of God unto the power of the devil, and to be moved with compassion towards them, and pray for their converfions. Yet confider, though they be left of God for a time, yet not all fo left, nor fo dreadfully catched by Satan, but that they may, through the mercy of God, be his scrvants, and converted, as none can deny but Manaffeb was ; and fo put a difference between their fearful fin and their perfons ; hate the one, but not the other ; hate the one in confcience to Gods commandment, utterly forbidding to regard fuch, Levi . 19. 31., for it is spiritual whoredom and defilement, Levin. 26. 6. because such as used them were Heathens, as, the Egyptians, Cansanites, Philistines, and Caldeans. Such as in Israel followed the Heathenish customs, were wicked and ungodly; as Saul, who was a murdaver, 1 Sam. 22. a profane neglecter of Gods Worship, 1 Chron.

1 Chron. 13. 3. and one whom God had forfaken, and taken his Spirit from, 1 Sam. 16. 14. an evil (pirit likewife was upon him, neither did God vouchfafe him any antwer by facred means, 1 Sam. 18. 16. and therefore he fell to Witches.

And what was Manasseh, but an idolater, and an observer of times, and so fell to Witchery, and to such as had Familiars? And the people which delighted in these, were haters of true Teachers, and believed falle Prophets, Dreamers, and Diviners, Jerem. 27.9. and with us, what are they, but vain loose livers, superstitious Neutrals, and such-like? But let them remember, that it will be but bitternesse in the end.

Let Saul and Manasseb be a warning to all of this kinde, befides examples abroad, and in Histories, with those amongst our felves, which may serve to terrifie all good Christians from seeking unto or regarding such : for it is plainly faid, The Lord settet bis face against such , to cut them off, Levit. 20. 6. And if God be against them, what may they look for in the end, seeing the least of these do intice people from God, in requiring faith of them, and do cause the people to run a whoring after them ? as Moses speaketh, Levit. 20. 6.

Being therefore in league with Satan and abominable idclaters, inticing people from their faith in God, they are therein worthy to die, or at least to receive punishment according to the Statutes : for many of them are hurting Witches, as well as curing, and certainly to be discovered and known, with far leffe difficulty then the other ; for they are to be difcerned by their practices here, working openly by their cures, &c. when as the other work onely fecretly and in darkneffe. And furely let no man doubt but that the finding out of fuch miscreants is an acceptable service before God, clfe why should the Lord have given fuch command to the children of Ifrael, and to have driven out the Nations from before them for those abominations, and to cause his owne people to be led into captivity for those fins, threatning judgements upon them, and likewife against those who should fuffer any fuch abominations amongh them; as in divers places both in the Prophecies of Jeremiah and Isaiah, besides many other places of Scripture both in the Old and New Teltament, aforcmenti-mentioned. Nay, there are threatnings against such as shall but refort unto them, as in Exod. 20. 6. and so in divers other places before mentioned.

And doth not the Lord by the Prophet Micab promife to cut off Witchcraft out of the land, and that they should have no more Soothlayers, in the time that he intended to bleffe a Nation? Micab 5. 12.

And in truth, was there no alteration in England at the beginning and continu nce of the fupprellion of this fin, and in fome Counties more then others ? And who are they that have been against the profecution of, or been partakers with fuch, but onely fuch as (without offence I may speak it) be enemies to the Church of God ? I dare not instance, not onely for fear of offence, but also for suits of Law.

For was there not above fourty in Effex, (as I take it) all in Tendring hundred, there where some were discovered, illegally outlawed, contrary to the Law of this Realm, upon a Writ of Confpiracy (as I have been credibly informed) I being one of the number, as I was likewife informed by fome which were my neighbours when I lived there, by the means of one who is reported to have been one of the greatest agents in Colchester-businesse, within the Town; when as there was never any notice given to any upon the Proclamations. as ought, I am fure ? This man, with another who is likewile reported to have been fellow-agent with him in that businesse, and the two chiefest in it, was the cause that some were not questioned in that Town : but for his part, I faw him labour and endeavour all he could to keep this woman, whom he fo much held withal from her legal Trial, and likewise heard him threaten both me and all that had given evidence against her, or informed what manner of woman the had been in her life and conversation, to their knowledge, or as they had heard : Yea, as I fince have heard, the was condemned at thet Allize, and by his procurement reprieved. Since which time, on her behalf, this hath been done.

Was not this an animation to all fuch people in those parts, when fo many Gentlemen and Yeomen thereabouts fhould thould be thus quellioned for tellifying their knowledge? And was it not a fit object for the devil, to work upon others? Let the world judge. For I have heard many of them fay, that the devil hath inticed them to Witchcraft by fome Sermons they have heard preached; as when Minillers will preach of the power of the devil, and his tormenting the wicked, and fuch-like : as I have heard fome fay (I will not fay, in the place where I now live) that the devil will fit and laugh at fuch and fuch offenders when he torments them, and will jeer at them in tormenting them, when he hath got them. A fearful thing! whenas the devil is tormented himfelf, and tormenteth none; for it is the wrath of God for fins committed, and the judgements of God for his mercies abufed.

There and fuch-like speeches, I have heard them fay, the devil hath made use of to perswade them to Witchery; coming to them, and asking them, How do you think to be faved? for your sins are so and so, (as he can set them out large enough) and you heard the Minister say that I will torment you: Give me your soul, and agree with me, and I will free you of hell-torments. Ignorant people have been thus seduced. Therefore it behoves all to be careful in giving the devil the least advantage, and to put a difference between their searful fin and their persons, hating the one, but not the other, for that by corrupt nature we are no less apple for the by him then they, walking in sand trefpass, Ephef.2.1.

But in obedience to the Law of God, and accomplifhment of all things in the Scripture contained, fuch ought not to live amongft us, left the Lord (hould deal with us as he did with others for the fame abominations; much leffe (hould any harbour fuch thoughts, as that there are not any : for did not the Lord leave fome of the nations, to try and prove lfrael? Judg. 2 and 3. and doth not S. John fay, (Matth. 3.7.) Ogeneration, of vipers, who bath warned you to flee from the wrath to come ? Do not they, when they covenant with the devil to free them of hell-torments, who cannot free himfelf of them, flee (as much as in them lieth) from the wrath to come?

As for you that are of fuch an opinion, furely, if neither all the threatnings and judgements of God against fuch, beides fides their own Confessions, will not prevail with you, methinks the mercies of God should, in that fifth of Micab; for it is undeniably true, that there was, is, and shall be Witches, till Christs conquest there spoken of, agreeable with that in Revel. 20. 1, 2, 3. which as yet cannot be: for without doubt the devil is bute in deceiving of Nations, and that not onely such as know not Christ, but others also; which could not be, if he were bound; nor the Jews or other Nations still to come: but other places of Scripture would be contradicted. And therefore every one must conclude with me, that (as yet) of Witchcraft there is no cnd.

Now whofoever thou beeft that thinkeft I ever made fuch gain of the way, or favoured any, and perfecuted others, or took bribes, I call God to witneffe, that confidering the charge of going to feveral places, and Affizes, and Goal deliveries. and the time I expended thereabouts, I never, one time with another, got fo much as I did by my Calling and Practice, towards the maintenance of my family. And as for taking any money, or other thing, by way of bribe or gift, I never did, to the value of one peny, neither one way nor other, but what I openly took in the view of the Townsmen where I came; and that in many places I never received peny as yet, nor any am like, notwithstanding I have hands for fatisfaction, except I should fue; but many rather fall upon me for what hath been received : but I hope fuch Suits will be difannulled, and that where I have been out moneys for Towns in charges and otherwife, fuch courfe will be taken, that I may be fatisfied and paid with reason. And for ever accusing one wrongfully, my conficience is clear before the Almighty : and I ever defired equal punishment to all that were guilty, or at least, if any favour, that it might be to those who coufessed : but those still fuffered, and others, though never fo suilty, escaped. The reaion why I did thus, was, because I defired so to fatisfie the world in this particular, that it must needs be a great errour to fave fuch, and not to question others at all, as before mentioned, they being all guilty alike.

And in truth, concerning him who is dead, who likewife was

was an agent in the businesse, for my part, I never knew that he either unjufily favoured any, or received bribes, or used fuch extremity as was reported of him; onely at first, before he or l ever went, many Towns uled extremity of themfelves, which after was laid on us. And I do not deny but at first he might watch some ; but to my knowledge, he soon left it, or at least in fuch a way as not to make them uncapable : but if he ever did at first, evidence was not taken till after they refled. And for my part, I never watched any at first, to as any way at all to diffurb-them in their brains ; but when some have been watched before I have come to them, I have cauled them to take their reft, before I would ever question with them : but now lately, and ever fince the Michaelmas after the first beginning, I never uled any but as aforefaid, with confent of the Juffices, and not otherwife, nor ever did But to my knowledge, we have been both much injured in words, and he fince his death : but I am certain (notwithstanding whatfoever hath been faid of him) he died peaceably at Manningtree, after a long fickneffe of a Confumption, as many of his generation had done before him, without any trouble of confcience for what he had done, as was fally reported of him. And though many of these things may seem very strange, and hardly to be believed, yet this is the very truth ; and that he was the fon of a godly Minister, and therefore without doubt with-Therefore let no man take upon him either in the Covenant. to speak or write more then he knoweth to be truth; for this I an able to manifelt and prove to be truth.

And so I leave my self to the censure of the world, yet detire it might be left to the Almighty, who knoweth the secrets of all hearts: For, bleffed are they that do his commandments, Revel. 22. 14.
