PREFACE.

HE Holy Ghoft tells us, Acts xi. 47. That the Lord added daily to the Church fuch as fhould be faved : A Place of Holy Scripture fufficient to ground that Article, whereby we conftantly profess to believe The Holy Catholick Church; or, as it is in the Nicene Creed, One Catholick and Apostolick Church. For this Text clearly teaches us these Three Things,

1. That

iv The PREFACE.

1. That there is a Church.

 That this Church is but One, that there is not Another. And,
 That we must be of that Church to be fav'd.

The Difficulty is, What this Church is? A Difficulty found out by the Genius of evil Men, who being not contented with what is reveal'd in GoD's own Book, have fought out many Inventions, and written Cart-loads of Books, more capable of diffracting Thoufands, than of directing One Man in the Right Way to Heaven.

As for my Part, I think to fee plainly (and without much to do) this Church, in God's Holy and Infallible Word, that Word, to which, whofoever addeth any thing, and from which, whofoever taketh any thing, is is cursed. For believing stedfastly that Jesus Christ, and Jesus Christ Alone, is the Way, the Truth, and the Life: I fee there a Society of Men professing to Believe in Him, having Communion together in the Use and Participation of all and every one of the Ordinances which Himfelf hath Inftituted to that Purpose: And these Ordinances, according to the Letter of their Inftitution, are administred by Hands rightly Ordained thereunto; For no Man taketh upon him this Office, but he that is Called, as Aaron was. So that this Church is One, becaufe the Members thereof have One and the fame Faith in the Holy Jefus, and their Communion is in the Partaking of the same Ordinances, which are all of his Inftitution, and of no Body elfe. This is the One Holy Catholick and Apoftolick [a 2] Church,

Church, which hath its Orthodox Ministry of Bishops, Priest, and Deacons untainted with Schifm, Herefy, or Apostacy; who minister duly the undefiled Service of the Church without Superstition, or Idolizing any Creature, whether Dead Men, or Men Alive, or any other Material or Image; for our GOD is a Spirit, that will be Worshipped in Spirit and in Truth.

Wherefore, that GOD may be rightly Served and truly Glorified upon Earth by this holy Congregation, let him be the fole Object of all Religious Worship. Read carefully upon this, the 7th Chapter of this Book, of the First Commandment of the Law. Secondly, Let all Christians purify themselves for the pure Worship of that GOD, whose Eyes are so pure, that he cannot behold Iniquity. And

The PREFACE. vii

And above all Things, Let us be well fatisfied, that the GOD with whom we have to do, is not only the Eternal God, without Beginning or End; not only the Almighty God, who doth what foever pleafes him, and hath made all Things; not only the infinitely wife God, who ordereth all things rightly and justly, and hath created nothing with a Capacity to oppose his Will. But let us also confider well, and never forget, that our God is Ens perse Existens, a Spirit who hath his Being from Himfelf, and is All-fufficient to Himfelf; who as he hath created All Things of Nothing, fo he can reduce them to Nothing when he will, and his Hand can never be shortned; he can create Thousands of Worlds, and govern them without Help, or even the Concurrence of

of any Creature, leaft of all of Satan, or of those devilish Spirits, supposed to be to bufy about the Affairs of this World, and such powerful Instruments in Go D's Hands to vex and punish Men; whereas we cannot but know and acknowledge that our Sins are Provocations enough, and our felves sufficient Instruments for all the Judgments he thinks fit to inflict upon us.

Another Thing is abfolutely neceffary, That our GOD may have his Due, and be truly glorified by us, tho' his unworthy Servants, and that is, that we hold faft and perfevere in the Profession of our holy Christian Faith, and be well fortified against all Arian and Socinian Herefies, that we may own and publish that the first Foundation of this Christian

Christian Religion is, that Jesus Christ, the Eternal Son of God is the Only Mediator and Redeemer promised by the Prophets; which is not prov'd by a ftronger Argument, than that which is formed from the Message fent by St. John the Baptift to our Saviour by two of his Disciples, and CHRIST'S Answer to him, Luke vii. 19, 20, 21, 22. For now Men do not make fufficient Reflection upon that Place, as this Book doth; that our Saviour takes no Notice of his caffing out Damons, which St. John's Disciples had feen him do; for by this it is evident, that this Casting-out, was the Curing one fort of those Diseases, which the Prophets had faid the Chrift should heal, as an infallible Proof that he was the Meffiah promised. indeed set forth a true Doctrine; for every Ill Opinion, especially in Religion, is originally from the Devil : But who can conceive that St. Paul fhould fo autentically warn Christians of it, particularly in the Point of Marriage and Abstinence from Meat, in this Place, rather than in the fecond Chapter of his Epiftles to the Coloffians, and in other Places, where he condemns other Doctrines, not less, if not more dangerous than thefe. There was no occalion here, or any where elfe, to call Doctrines of Devils, those that were condemned by him; his condemning them was fufficient to inform all Believers, that they proceeded from another Principle than the Spirit of God. Many are the unanfwerable Reasons for our understanding of these Words, as Epiphanius long ago expounded them, which Expofition is approv'd by many very learned Men. There are feveral ancient Copies of the New Testament, wherein after these Words, Doctrines of Devils, you will find these, For they hall be Worsbippers of. dead Men; as those that were ador'd in Israel. this a set of a set of a second (a) II.

Two first Principles, or two Gods, one good, and the other evil; and the fecond was called Damon: yet this is a Truth clear enough, that the Heathen did acknowledge one only Sovereign God, and Mafter above the reft. There are indeed many Contradictions in their Writings, which we will not undertake to reconcile; but certain it is, that many, yea the most confiderable among them, believed this one only God, and Plastarch himfelf affirms it, for he introduces Cleombutus, faying, that the Stoicks were of the fame Opinion with him, and that they held, that in fo great Multitude of Gods, there was but one Eternal and Immortal, and that all the reft have had a Being by Birth, and shall have an End by Death. It was Plato's Doctrine in Timeo at Parm. Celsus likewife nameth one God, who is above all. Apuleius relating Plato's Opinion fays that he believ'd but one God, who made all Things, and who is the Giver of all good Things. St. Austin, takes notice of his doctrine De civit. Dei. l. 9. cap. 16. and Vives in his Notes quotes those Places of Plato where it is afferted. Trismegiftus in in Alclepius teaches every where, that there is one God: Deus unus, faith he, more than once, Solus & merito Solus, "The Lord of Eternity, that made the "World, the Father and the Lord of all "Things, by whom the celeftial Gods, "and afterwards Men, have been created; the only Governors of the World, whom every one obeyeth. He faith further, that all Things are of him, and depend upon his Will. Christotle tells us, that it is a common Opinion received of all Men, that all Things are of God: As for him, he believes that there is but one God, who perfeveth all Things.

It should be noted, that the' Plutarch speaks of two, yet it doth not appear that his Opinion was that these two Gods were equally supreme, for himself called one Damon, and finds a vast difference betwixt the great Gods and the Damons; for in the same Treatise he affirms, that what the Fable relates of Osioris and Typho did happen neither to the Gods, nor to Men, but to some great Damons who proved stronger than Men: and and yet their Nature is not purely divine, but compounded of a spiritual and corporeal Being : whereupon he declares the Opinion of Plato, who faith, that the Damons are between the Gods and Men; and that Iss and Osiris had been changed from good Dæmons into Gods, because of their Vertues. Plutarch doth not admit of two Principles only, but puts a third betwixt them, and fay that they called the good one Oromazes, the evil Arimanius, and the third Mithres : He tells us farther, that this Opposition betwixt two Principles, is found only in this lower World, under the Moon ; that these contrary Powers are not equal, and the best is the strongest : He quotes Homer, who calls Jupiter the Master, the Governor, the Lord of the whole World. : Lastly, in the fame Place he owns one God, that rules and governs the whole World; and in his Difcourfe of the Word 'Lis, he declares that there is bur one only God.

That the great Gods, have no Communication with Men.

His Affertion feems to be contradicted, in the Acts of the Holy Apostles, ch. 14. where it is faid, that the People, took Barnabas for Jupiter, and call'd Paul Mercurius; it is faid that Jupiter and Apollo answered by Oracles, and that Celfus, calleth the Sun the Moon, and the Stars truly Celestial Heroes: Yet this Opinion is found in very good Authors, whereby it appears, that the Heathen did hold this as a Truth, That the Celestial Gods did not meddle with Men, and had no Commerce with them ; that it had been a thing unworthy of them to come down and that it was only by the Dæmons, that Men had any Communication with Heaven.

16 A TREATISE

ven. See what Apuleius faith of it (a); his Doctrine is that of Plato, which St. Austin relates thus, De Civit Dei. l. 8. c. 8. • They place their Dæmons be-· tween Heaven and Earth, that as no. God can have any Commerce with . Men, these Damons do carry to the Gods, the Prayers of Men, and from thence they bring unto Men that which • they have obtained; for they that hold this Opinion, do believe it an un-' worthy thing, that the Gods should ' have any thing to do with Men, or Men with the Gods; but it is con. ' venient that the Dæmons should have ' to do both with the Gods, and with ' Men, to let the Gods know what Men ' do defire, and to bring unto Men, ' what the Gods have granted." Upon this Vives tells us of Plato's Banquet, where is found what St. Auftin faith; and noteth alfo, that Plato afcribeth this Doctrine to Socrates. ' Love, faith · Diotimus to Socrates, is a great Dæmon, • and every Dæmon is betwixt God and ' Mortal Man, and his Office is to interpret betwixt both, and to carry from Men their Prayers and their Sa-' crifices ; and from Gods, Commands ' and Rewards: And by this Channel we ⁶ have all that concerns Predictions, Sa-· crifices, Inchantments, the Art of Divif nation and Magick : for God doth not ' communicate himself unto Man, but ' all the Communication is by the Media-' tion of Dæmons, and by them the Gods fpeak to Men, whether when ' they are awake, or when they are afleep. Plutarch fays, that to take away Dæmons, is to take away the Communication between the Gods and Men; that they believe not that the Gods are prefent at their Sacrifices, nëither do they take notice of them perfonally, but that Bufinefs is committed to the Ministers of the Gods, viz. the Damons ; that not the Gods, but the Dæmons did prefide in the Oracles; that it is fit we should believe the Gods are wholly freed from all Commerce with Things on the Earth: Yea it was a Dæmon named Phæbus who fpoke in the Oracle at Delphos. Finally he tells us, that he hath taken away the Art of Divination from the Gods, to appropriate it abfolutely to the Dæmons. It is alfo the Opinion of Apuleius, in the fore-cited Place, wherein he attributes to Dæmons all the Miracles that are wrought, all the Prophefies of Things to come, and all Sacrifices.

That if the People of Lyftra cryed out, feeing a Miracle done by the Apoftles, that the Gods become like Men, were come down to them, there were no reason to think that they fpake of the Celeftial Gods; the Dæmons, whole Habitation was the highest part of the Air, were also called Gods, as Plutarch hath observed. eth Pythagoras, Xenocrates and Crisippus for it, as holding the fame Opinion. Plato in Timeo faith, that Saturn, Jupiter, Juno, and the reft were Dæmons, and speaks of their being begotten. Trismegistus in Asclepius saith, That there is an Administrator between Heaven and Earth, whom we call Jupiter; and that there is another Jupiter Plutonius, who hath Dominion over the Earth, and the Sea, and who feeds Animals and Plants, and places both these Jupiters under the Sovereign God. It may be faid, that the Apostles Miraclé seemed so great to the People of Lystra, that it made them raife up their Thoughts immediately to the Celestial Gods, and to call for Sacrifices, which the Priest did not oppose; their Business; being to keep the People in their blind Devotion; but from thence no Conclusion can be drawn against what we read of the Doctrine commonly held among the Heathen.

Divinity, above all the reft; and Dæmons, that were his Lieutenants, Satrapes, and Generals of his Armies. Origen in his firft Book againft Celfus faith, that Men fhould not pray to the Sun, the Moon, the Stars, nor yet to the Celeftial Angels, that are more certain: But it is Origen that fpeaks, who hath fpoken nothing of Celfus before ; but he only blam'd the Jews for Worshiping Heaven, and Angels, while they defpis'd the Sun, the Moon, and the Stars, which are the most excellent Parts of Heaven ; and which do foretel many Things. That the Dæmons had been Men; and of Evil Dæmons.

THE constant Opinion of the Heathen about Dæmons, was that they had been Men, and for their excellent Virtues and eminent Qualities, which they fhew'd whilft they were upon Earth, were thought worthy to be taken up, and be made Partakers of fuch Portion of a Divine Thing, as inabled them to be Mediators, Interpreters, and Transactors in all manner of Businesses betwixt the Gods and Men : Tho' the Platonicians did believe a kind of Dæmons that had never been Men, yet they believ'd likewife, that the Souls of great Men were glorify'd after there Death, and became Dæmons. expresly diffinguishes these two forts of Dæmons, and faith, ' That these are ' called Gods, who have lived juftly and · prudently, are afterwards honour'd ' by Men as Divinities, as Amphiarnus ' in Boetia, Mopfus in Africa, Afiris in Egypt, " Aesculapius every where: And that these ' were that fort of Dæmons who had ' been formerly in Human Bodies. But ' that there is another kind of Dæmons, ' Nobler and more Excellent, which ' were never bound with the Bonds ' of a Body.' Take notice of this of Plato: His Dialogue intitled Cratylus, was compos'd to shew the Signification of Words, and how they agree with the Things themselves. Socrates acts the part of a Judge, between Hermogenes, Pythagoras and Cratylus, a Follower of Heraclitus; this is he, who for the most part expounds Names; observe what they fay of the Name of Dæmons; 'Do you ' know, faith Socrates, who those are ' that Hesiodus calls Dæmons? Hermes ' answers, I know not Socrates: And ' do you not know that fort of Men " which he calls the Golden Race? Hermo-• genes genes replies, I know that Socrates fays, • That when that Race of Men was covered with Death, they were called ' Damons, Saints raised up above the · the Earth, Guardians of Mortal Men, 6 and their Protectors against the Evils e-that might happen to them. Hermoge-· nes. What do you conclude from that? ' Socrates. I believe that he calls a Golden Race, not that which is made of that ' Metal, but a fort of Men very virtuous and excellent in all Things; but ' that which makes me believe it, is be-· cause he faith that we are a Generation ' of Iron. Hermes. You fay true Socra-' tes; Do you not think then that if there were amongst us any honest Man, that he was of that Golden Generation, according to Hesiodus his Opinion? . Hermes. It ought to be fo Socrates; ' Are honeft Men any thing elfe but wife Men? Hermes. Certainly they · are wife Men. Socrates. He calleth therefore, as I think, that fort of Mere . Damons, because they were wife and f learned; for according to the ancient Dia-

· Dialect of our Language, this Name • is given to them that are fuch : there-· fore both he, and other Poets in great · Numbers do speak perfectly well, when • they fay that after a Man is dead well, he receives a great Reward, and that ' he is made a Damon, according to the ⁶ Title due to his Wifdom : As for me, · 1 fear not to affirm, that every good ' Man is a Damon, and that he should ' be so called both in his Life-time, and ' after his Death. St. Austin doubted not but this was the Platonick Doctrine, fince the Title of one of his Chapters is this, De Civitate Dei. l.g. c. 11. Of the Platonician's Opinion, who believe that the Souls of Men are Dæmons after they are gone out of their Bodies. Plutarch in his Treatife of the Familiar Spirit of Socrates, faith expresly, That the deify'd Souls became Day mons, and take care of Men.

After this it cannot be faid that Plato, did not teach, that there were Damons which had been Men, and thefe very Damons were effected the true Mediators bebetwixt the celestial Gods and Men, who carried the Prayers up to Heaven, and brought down Bleffings and Rewards; who received the Oblations, and return. ed Anfwers. This is precifely what Hesidus taught : He was a Poet, I confess, but belides that, the Poets were the People's Divines; this is quoted as a great Author, and we have feen before that it is particularly upon his Opinion that Socrates in Plato groundeth his touching Damons; tho? he maketh likewife, that many other Poets had faid the fame Things. Hear how Plato Speaks in another Place upon the same Subject, Shall. we not believe Hesiodus? Surely after the Men of this fort be dead; theyare constituted Demons, Saints, and rais'd up above the Earth (very good ;) and appointed to pre-Serve mortal Men from Evil, and to protect them; (truly we believe it fo.) in n

Here we should particularly take Notice of Plato's Opinion, because his Sect was very much followed in St Paul's Time. Vives, upon the last quoted D Place

Place of St. Auftin, doth observe, that the Sentiments of Philosophers, tho' of the fame Sect, were very different a. bout the Gods, and that Apuleius was of another Opinion than Plato in that Point ; and I cannot find that Plato distinguishes, as Apuleius does, two forts of Demons, whereof some had been Men, and others not: Yea, Apuleius fays only that Philosophers did suppose three forts of Gods, viz. a sovereign one, the first and only God of that Order, above the World, and incorporeal : after him the Planets, and the other Divinities, called Celeftial; and then, laftly, they whom the ancient Romans named Medioximi, whole Quality, Power and Habitation were below that of celestial Gods, and above that of Men. But there he makes no Diftinction of Damons; and all that he fays will not make us believe otherwife, but that he meant those. Souls of Men which (in his Opinion) being feparated from their Bodies, became Damons, being rais'd up to that middle. Nature betwixt the Gods and Men, which he calls properly Damons, and to whom whom he also gives the Name of Gods. It's true, he likewife allows the Name of Damon to Saturn, Rea, Jupiter, Juno, and others that were accounted celestial Gods; but we must observe, that the most common Opinion was, that those Gods had been Men, and that the fame was conftantly believ'd of them; which Plutarch faith of Ifis and Ofiris, of Hercules and Bacchus, viz. that of Damons they had been made Gods, and that the Worship render'd to them was a mixed Worship of that of the Gods, and that of Damons. Plato in in like manner calls Demon the Soul of a Man, even before it be out of the Body, with respect to that Excellency that makes him capable of becoming a Demon, after his Separation from the Body. All this perfuades me that Plato believed but one fort of Damons, properly fo called, and what I have noted of him juftifies that he own'd, that all those Damons were the Souls of Men departed, who had lived in the Practice of Vertue. This is fo much the more probable that he faith, that it was above his Capacity to

to explain well what they were, whom they called Damons, and that we must abide by the Opinion of ancient Authors, who being the Sons of the Gods, did best know their Parents Opinion. Now the Ancients are Hesiodus, and the other Poets of the fame Opinion, and who have faid that the Demons were the Souls of Men of the Golden Generation ; Hermes Trismegistus was one of the Sons of the Gods. St. Auftin declares his Opinion thus; De Civit. Dei. l. 8. c. 26. he gives to understand that he believ'd that the Damons were made of the Souls of Men departed. Cicero, who was a: Platonician faith, in the second Book of Laws, That the Denicals were Festivals dedicated to the Dead, which (faith he) had not been, had not the Ancients believ'd that they leaving this Life, are admitted into the Number of the Gods.

As for Apuleius his Notion, That there were two forts of Damons, some that had been Men, and others that had never been (a) cumber'd with corporeal Bonds : It is remarkable,

(a) Si nubes sublime volitant, &c. Quid tandem sutura censes Dæmonum corpora, quæ concreta multo minus, & tanto remarkable, that he afcribes to the fecond fort, certain Bodies formed of the purest Air, and of a most fubtile Composition. It is the Sentiment of Plutarch. who tells us in The Oracles that are ceased, That they are Spirits cloathed with an airy Substance. Thus Amiot hath translated the 125th Verse of Hesiodus's Works, called The Works of Days, quoted by Plutarch : But when Hesiodus names "npu iscainevor, he speaks of Men of the Golden Generation, who had been made Damons by Jupiter: From whence may be conjectur'd, that those excellent Damons, according to Apuleias, who had Bodies formed of the pureft and most fubtile Air, were according to Hefiodus and Plutarch that quotes him, the Souls of dead Men. And it must be confess'd, that the most common Opinion was, that there were none other.

But suppose that the Notion of Apulieus were admitted, and Plato held the fame (which doth not appear.) The Distribution made by Apuleius of the feveral Employments of each fort of Damons, must also be own'd to have been a common Doctrine, and Plato's Doctrine too; and this is manifest, that the Mediatorship betwixt the Gods and Men, could belong (according to the common Opinion, and that of Plato) only to the Damons that had been mention'd: and this is the Affertion; for in the first place Apuleius faith, That the Lares, and such as were called Dei Penates, are of the Number of those Damons that had been Men. And in Explication of Plato's Principles, he fays, That the Damons, whom we may call Genia and Lares, are esteemed to be the Ministers of the Gods, the Guardians of Men, and their Interpreters; if they requested any thing of the Gods. Secondly, Apuleius ascribes to the Damons who never were Men, another Office than of Mediators betwixt the Gods and Men; he fays, That they are always near and Affistant to Men, semper ad funt, to consider all their Actions, and take Notice even of their Thoughts; that after Men are departed, they 80 go with their Souls to give Testimony of their Behaviour, whereupon Judgment is given. Hence it appears, that the Office of carrying the Prayers and Oblations of Men to Heaven, and bringing from thence Bleffings and Rewards, did belong to the Damons that had been Men; that which Plato hath taught very clearly, in the Places I have cited. They. that will be more particularly informed concerning the Diffinction of Damons, may read Marcillus Ficinus upon the ioth Book of Plato's Republick, at the latter end, and in Timeo, c. 14. But let it be noted, that here I take notice only of the airy Damons Mediators betwixt the celeftial Gods and Men; which were also the Object of the Peoand the law ple's Worthip.

If it be objected, that the Damons cannot well be called the Ministers of the great God, fince they believed fome good and fome evil Damons. I answer, that I have spoken of the Damons Mediators, and the common Object of the Heathen's religious Worship; the Subject ject requir'd not any notice to be ta2 ken of others, nor to be diffinguish'd, where the Heathen made no Distinction. If in Plutarch fome did believe wicked Damons, others do condemn that Opinion. According to Plato all Damons were Gods; and that Philosopher acknow. ledged no Gods but good ones. We have, faith St. Austin, De Civit. Dei. l. 8. c. 13. Plato's Opinion who faith that the Gods are good, that there is no evil Gods. which destroys their Opinion, who hold, that the evil Gods are to be appeas'd with Sacrifices, lest they should do us Mischief. Celsus own'd none but good ones. Origen contra Cels. lib. 8. fol. 103. 11. 1.3

It is here objected, that the Heathen in general did not believe that there were Damons in a middle State betwixt the great God and the Heroes, fince the Perapateticks believ'd no Spirits fave those which God had fixed to each celestial Globe to turn it: That the Stoicks own'd no Damons, and that Socrate's Opinion was very agreeable to that of Christians. For answer to this I fay,

I fay, that the particular Opinion of one Sect is no Reason why the most common should not be attributed to the general; my Defign was to fhew what was the most general Object of the People's Devotion, and the vulger Opinion on which it was grounded; I was not obliged to take notice of all the particular Opinions of Philosophers which were not follow'd by the People. The Peripateticks did appear but very little in the Time of St. Paul; and these Intelligences which they join'd to each Sphere, were none other then the Damons, which the Platonicians affixed to them, as Marcinus Ficinus witnelles; for all this they might believe the airy Dæmons we are difcourfing of; I read nothing of them for that Time upon that Subject. The Opinion of Epicurus, who feem'd to deny all manner of Spirits, was then better approved than that of the Peripateticks, and yet it put no ftop to the Devotion then in use among the People, according to the Principles of Platonicians, Pythagorans, and the Poets: E As

As for Aristotle, lib. de Mundo, c. 6. if he be the Author of that Book, he furely believ'd no Dæmons, either good or bad; he believed one only God, who being placed in the highest part of the Universe, did govern all the Motions thereof, as a Machine with feveral Wheels and Springs depending one upon another, tho' their Motions were very different ; None otherwije, faith hes than a Puppet Engineer, by one first Spring makes the rest to move, and so sets on work and motion all other Machines. In his Opinion there is not a better Sentiment, nor more worthy of God's Goodness and Majesty, than this, That this Sovereign Power is Seated in the highest Part of Heaven, communicates to all Things, even the farthest, of what is necessary for their Preservation. He cannot approve their Fancy, who hold, That this Power comes down, and is inserted into Things unworthy of it, and which cannot be named with Modesty: Neither doth he believe that he needs any Servants, or Help, but he can do all Things by one fingle Motion, with which hé

he fets on work all others afterwards. And yet he confesses, that ancient Authors have faid, that all was full of Gods; and indeed Plato hath it in his Epin. This Doctrine of One God, who moves all Things by Himfelf, and without Help, is taught also by Aristotle's Natural Philosophy. It is true, that in his Metaphysick he allows to each Heaven a separate Substance, unmoveable, which gives Motion to the Orb. But in the fecond Book of Heaven, A. 12. he affirms, That Heaven moves of it felf, as an Animal, and attributes a Soul to it, which his ancient Greek, Arabian, and Latin Interpreters have called a reafonable Soul; fo that it is not eafy to know Aristotle's particular Opinion : However, hear what he faith, lib. 2. Metaph. c. 8. "It hath been taught by " our Predeceffors, even the most an-" cient, that the Planets are Gods, &c. " If any Man, (excepting him who is " the only first) takes up this Senti-"ment that the Ancients believ'd that 66 the E 2

" the first Substances were as Gods, he will judge that this was divinely faid.

Let every Man reflect on this Place, that will not believe, that any among the Heathen was fimple enough to think that the Planets were Gods; or that Jupiter, Mars, &c. had their Abode affign'd them in the Planets that bear their Names; and which have it, faith he, " only be-" caufe they believ'd that those Gods had " particular Dominion upon the Influence " of those Planets. I remember not to have read of this Notion any where; there is fomething that comes near it, in the divers Sentiments of Philosophers, mention'd by Cicero upon this Subject, in his Book De Natura Deorum; but I have found in the first Book, that feveral Philosophers believ'd that the Planets were Gods. Plato in his Epinomis, teaches that they are animated Bodies, which must be ador'd as Gods: and in Crytulus he fays, that those Gods are called ow, because they run continually. The Poets have declared, (a) that

(a) that Apollo was in the Sun, as in a Chariot, which he guided; Diana likewife in the Moon, &c. Apuleius, in the Book which he writ of Plato's Principles, and of Socrates his God, doth divide the celeftial Gods into visible and invisible; and faith, that the visible ones are the Lights of the World, the Sun, the Moon, and the Stars.

But let us return to Aristotle, and I find that in his Time Men became Gods; he doth not declare his own Opinion of the Matter, but here is what he faith, "If Men become Gods, as they "hold, becaufe of the Excellencies of "their Vertues, the Habit of their "Mind, must necessarily be contrary to a brutish Habit. In one Word, in the 7th B. De Reipub. he tells us, That the Gods must be honour'd by the People, and that the Service to be perform'd for them, ought to be committed to the oldeft Men, who have need of Reft. But if all this was taught, and after this Manner, by the Peripateticks in St. Paul's Time, those Philosophers did not hold an Opinion contrary to the common People, who believed that the Damons were dead Men, which became the Object of the Adoration of the Living.

As for the Stoicks, I confels that they acknowlidg'd not the Mediation of Dæmons, fince they believ'd that the Supreme God was the World; and that all the Gods Worshipp'd under several Names, were only the feveral Parts of the World, whic were all Animated by, and Partakers of the Divinity of the whole, Cicero de Nat. libr. 1, 2. n. 3. But you know that this Opinion was not receiv'd among the People that worship'd the Celeftial Gods, and Damons Mediators betwixt the Gods and Men; nor by the wife Men, who did own one Sovereign God, Maker and Mafter of the World, and rais'd up above the Hea-

Heavens. (a) God, faith Trismegistus in Afclepio, lifted up above the top of the highest Heaven, is every where, takes Notice of all Things: for beyond Heaven there is a Place without Stars, seperated from all Corporeal Things. God, faith Aristotle, bath the first and the highest Seat.

As for what is faid of Socrates, That his Notions were conformable to thole of Christians, especially about Providence, I have read what Xenophou relates in lib. 1. and 4. of memorable Things, and have found their Philosophy intangled with Pagan Errors; but I met with no Christianity there. He speaks almost every where of Gods, in the Plural Number, and sometimes calls them Dæmons: at the latter end of the 4th Book, he faith, That a Dæmon whom he calls God, hindred him from answering his Judges. Whereupon both Apuleius and Plutarch have written each of them a Treatife; the former of the

God, and the latter of the Dæmon of Socrates; or as Amiot translates it, Concerning the Familiar Spirit of Socrates; and both do affert, that this God of Socrates was a Dæmon; that is, one of those leffer Gods, which were below and inferior to the great Gods: And will any Man think what Socrates fays, lib. 4. That the Gods must be honour'd after the Manner of the Country where we are; doth favour much of Christianity. Examine in the fame Book, his Conversation with Theodora, and what Xenophon faith of him in his Banquet; and I affure my felf that Erasmus himself would not cry out, O Saint Socrates, pray for us ! The wife Heathen themfelves were not pleased with the Discourses of Socrates, touching the Divinity. They have taken Notice, that he called the Sun God, and the Spirit of Man; and that he fpake fometimes as if there had been many (b). His Death was honourable to him, and made him be looked upon as a Martyr, for having true Sentiments of the Divinity : But the Truth is, that he had no fettled Notions of God, and that he was put to Death merely for doubting of, and oppoling the common Opinion the others had of the Gods, which were established by Authority. The Fathers have fhew'd that they have had no high Efteem for him: And he that called him the Athenian Buffoon (as indeed Irony was his beloved Figure) was not minded to propose him as an Example to Christians. What St. Aufin relates of him, De Consensu Ev. c. 18. That every God is to be ferved after that Manner that himself bath ordained; doth fhew, that even an Heathen is to keep the Orders of the Divinity which is tendered to him; but it justifies also, that this wife Man was never enlightned with the right Knowledge of that One only God, who hath reveal'd himfelf to Man by his Word. However, Socrate's Opinion was not the common Opinion of the Heathen, which we are now difcourfing of; for Xenophon, lib. 1. Rer. Mem. tells us, That this Philosopher believed lieved that the Gods did take care of Humane Affairs after another Manner than many did imagine.

Of the Places where those Dæmons inhabited who were made Gods; and of COTTA's Opinion.

WHAT is faid, that Merit had raifed up (Hercules, Liber, &c.) to Heaven feems to contradict what is affirm'd, that Damons dwell only in the Air : We have faid indeed, that the Dæmons Mediators betwixt the Gods and Men, did dwell in the Air. St. Auftin tells us, That it was the Opinion of the Heathens, De Civ. 1.8. c. 18, 21, 22. & lib. 9. c. 12. for giving an Account of their Doctrine, he faith, "The Gods do hold the high-" eft Place, Men the loweft, and Dæ-" mons the middle; for the Habitati-" on of the Gods is in Heaven, that " of Men upon Earth, and the Air is " that of Dæmons." Apuleius, De D. S. faith, " That the Dæmons are betwixt " Heaven and Earth, in that Place of " Air that is betwixt them. But this " Air where the Dæmons dwell, is not the nearest to the Earth; for as A-" puleius hath it, the Planets are above 6.6 " in Heaven in the Æthere, that is, " in the Heat of a pure Fire ; why " fhould the Air alone, among the E-" lements, the Air which incloses, be " left a Wilderness by Nature, and de-" ftitute of Animals fit to cultivate the " fame? For what fome fay, that Birds " are the Animals of the Air, cannot " be true : There is no Bird that flies " higher than the top of Olympus, which " is but few Furlongs eminent above " the Earth : What shall become then " of that great Space of the Air, which " reaches from the Moon to the top of " Olympus? Shall that be destitute of " Animals? Shall that Part of Nature " be dead and of no use? Confider it " well : Birds cannot be efteemed but terrestrial Creatures, they fetch their " Food F 2

"Food from the Earth, there they "make their Reft when they are " weary; and the Air which they beat "with their Wings in flying, is only " this loweft Air, near the Earth. " Reason therefore will have us con-" ceive, that what is truly the Air, " hath also its proper Animals." By all these Reasons he affirms, that the Dæmons are the Inhabitants of this Air above Olympus. It is also the Sentiment of Hermes in Asclepio; " I speak, " faith he, of the Dæmons which I " believe do dwell with us, and of " those airy ones, which dwell in the " purest Part of the Air, above us and " our Earth; where arifes no Fog, and no " Disturbance." As for that Part of the Air nearest to the Earth, Hermes thinks it to be the Place of the Damned, for he faith, "When the Soul is feparated " from the Body, the great Demon exa-" mines the Merits thereof ; if it be " adorned with Piety and Juffice, it is " permitted to go into convenient Pla-" ces; but if he finds it polluted with 66 Sins, and covered with Vices, he -R. K / st eres " throws

" throws it down into low Places, and " expose it to Storms and Whirlwinds in the Air, to Water and 66 Fire, which do often fight together, 66 " and fo being always agitated with continual Pains, it is toffed, without $6 " ceasing, betwixt Heaven and Earth, " by the Waves of the World. Mark well these Storms and Hurricanes betwist Heaven and Earth; for, to my thinking, this clearly teaches us, that Heaven, to the which these Heroes were raised up, is that Space of the Air above the Clouds where are no Commotions, and which fhould be that convenient Place for righteous Souls.

However, I have fufficiently fhew'd, that according to the most constant, and common Doctrine of the Heathen, the Mediator Damons, are the Souls of dead Men, who lived virtuously, and whose constant Abode is in the highess and purest Part of the Air, whence they come down to Men, and go up to the Gods: If I have faid that Herculus, Liber, &c. were raised up to Heaven by their Merits,

Merits, that was the Opinion of the Heathen, as it is express'd in the Laws of the twelve Tables. (a) We must fay therefore, that the Heaven whereinto these were admitted after Death, was the highest and purest Part of the Air, which is often called Heaven, and where do dwell those Souls which became Damons; or elfe we must fay with Plutarch, that Hercules, Liber, &c. were turned from Damons into Gods, and consequently alfo raifed up from the Air into Heaven. As indeed Hesiodus his Opinion, as Plutarch witnesses, in his Treatife of The Oracles that are ceas'd, was that the Souls of Virtuous Men, were changed into Heroes, or Demi-Gods : that afterwards they became Damons, that at last, being well purified by Vertue, they were made Gods, except those that died Damons, and fuch as were again entangled with mortal Bodies. This

This proves that the very celestial Gods, whom the greatest part worship'd, had been Men as well as the Demons, and that St. Auftin was in the right De Civ. D. l. 8. c. 26. when he faid, That the whole Religion of the Heathen confisted in the Worsbip of dead Men. That which he proves by the Authority of Varro and Trismegistus, I will add to what he fays, that the Genealogy of the Gods and their Actions, let forth by the Poets, and particularly by Hefiodus, as also written in Prose, and serioufly related by Apollodorus, as true Hi. ftories, could not beget any other Sentiment in the People than this, That the Gods, whom they ferved, had been Men. They could not but be confirmed in this Opinion, by the Apotheoses, when they faw that publick Authority did from time to time canonize, and fet in the Number of the Gods, fome Men, whom they had feen to die. The Civil Magistrate, and both the high and ordinary Priests did unanimously labour to maintain the Vulgar in the fame Opinion, pinion, their Defign being to have the higheft Honours rendred after Death to them, who had beft ferved the State, whether in War, or in Peace; and keep the People in Awe, by the Fear of that Divine Power, which thofe were rais'd up to in Heaven, to whom they had yielded Obedience upon Earth. This appears particularly by Plato's Books, De Republica. The Priefts were taken from among the Heads of the People, who could bear no longer the Burden of the Civil Wars; or whom they thought fit to make the Heads of Religion, for the Good of the State.

As for the private Notions they might have in their Souls concerning the Divinities they ador'd, and their Worship, we may judge of them by the Discourse of one of their High-Priests, Cotta in Cicero, De Nat. D. l. 3. ' I ' have been sensibly touched, Balbus, ' with your Exhortation, to remember ' that I am Cotta, and a High-Priest; I perceive that the Meaning is, that I ought to defend the Doctrine we ' have

' have receiv'd from our Anceftors, concerning the immortal Gods, and ' maintain the Sacrifices, Ceremonies ' and Religion, that's my Defign, and ' I did it always; and all the Discourse, ' whether of the Learned, or of the ' Ignorant, cannot take from me that · Opinion I receiv'd from my Anceftors · touching the Worship of the Celestial Gods; but in the Cafe of Religion, ' I confult with the High-Priests that ' went before me, and not with the old Philosophers. I give more Credit ' to the Divine Lelius, than to the most · learned Stoicks in the World. All the · Religion of the People of Rome confifts in the Sacrifices and Divinations: • to which I may add the Predictions and Augures, whereof we are warned by the Interpreteis of the Sybils, and by 6 ' the Harispices of Prognosticators. I hold ' that none of these Devotions is to be defpifed : and I am fure that the · Foundations of our State were lay'd ' upon the Prognostciations of Romalus, ' and upon the Ceremonies instituted by Numa. he did renounce to hold to the Habitation of his Ancestors, and out of Respect to their Authority. And what think you now? Doth not he, who calls himfelf the High-Priest among Christians, make good use of Heathenish Principels? Do ye not think, that those who would have us believe the Trinity, and other Mysteries of our Holy Religion, and the Divinity of the Holy Scripture, upon none other Ground than because all that was believ'd by them that went before us, or upon the Authority of the Church, or of other Leaders, that they have not profited little by Cotta's Instructions. But are you not grieved to see the Truths of Christianity treated at no better Rate than were the Fables of the Heathenish Worship. Do you not Judge then, that these, who so plainly declare that they stand to Christ's Religion only upon Men's Authority, have not in their Hearts better Notion's of it than Cotta had of that of his falle Gods . It is apparent enough, that they who fo highly affert their Authority, of being the only Guides in Matters of G 2 Religion

Religion, have the fame Defign with the High-Priest, in Cicero's Time. This is the only thing they aim at, to Maintain the ignorant People in their Opinion, and in the Practice of those Ceremonies already receiv'd, but never to permit them to examine the Doctrine, enquire after the Truth, and reform and rectify their Sentiments, Socrates was put to Death for offering at it, and the Maxim that caus'd it did not die with him ; Plato profited by his Example, and taught Cotta what we have heard of him : for he speaks thus, lib. legum 11. "I have faid that " the Souls of the Dead have fome " Power, whereby they take care of " humane Affairs; that is true, and "much might be faid on that Subject: " wherefore, unless Men were out of " their Senfes, they must believe upon " the Account of the Ancients and " commonly receiv'd Tradition, and " the Authority of the Law-givers that " have ordained it.

Of the Worship both of the Gods and Dæmons.

CINCE we are entred upon the Subject of Diemon's become Gods, we must not leave it without some Reflections upon what Platarch fays, That their Worship was a mixt Worship of that of the Gods, and of that of Dæmons : which clearly discovers that there was a Difference, at leaft, according to the Philosophers Opinion, betwixt the Worthip peculiar to the celeftial Gods, and that which belonged to Damons; as indeed Trismegistus, fo often quoted by St. Auftin, faith in Asclepio, " That "Heaven and the celeftial Gods were " pleas'd in receiving the Admirations, " Praifes, and Obedience of Men; where-" upon he makes a large Commentary, "and then ends with thefe Words. " To Honour the Divinity with Sim-" plicity

" plicity of Spirit, and a pure Heart, " to reverence his Works, and give " Thanks to his Will, which alone is " good; this is true Philosophy, which " is polluted by no troublesome Cu-" riofity." At the latter end he falls. to Prayer, and Asclepius having whifper'd to him, that to his Prayers should be added offering of Incense and other Perfumes, he grows angry, and answers. thus, " Asclepius, you ought to have " better Thoughts; it is a kind of Sa-" criledge to offer Incenfe to any thing " elfe but God; when we pray, no-" thing is wanting to him, who him-" felf is all Things; but we worship by " giving of Thanks; the high Incenfe " which God requires is, that Men should " give him Thanks." I think to fee by this, the Difference betwixt the Worship of the Gods and that of Demons; which must be this, That the Worship of the Gods must be spiritual, and confisted in holy Meditations, the Affection of the Heart, giving of Thanks, and Obedience; and that of Damons, was all that Pomp of Ceremonies, and of. fering

fering of Sacrifices: As indeed as to Temples, Trismegistus faith " That as " the Supreme God, the Lord and "Father, hath made the celeftial " Gods; fo Man hath made the Gods " that are in Churches. And what follows clearly shews, that his Notion was, that the Gods made by Men, were truly Gods, made up (faith he) of the Divine Nature, and of the Matter that was found among Men. It is true as it is added, that Men cannot create Souls, but they call in the Souls of Dæmons, or of Angels. Apuleius speaking of Dxmons of the fecond Order, which had been Men, faith likewife, "That they " were called Gods, who having led a " wife and just Course of Life, were " honoured by Men, who confecrated " Temples unto them, and appointed " Ceremonies for their Worship, and " by these own'd them for Divinities. Wherefore it is manifest, that Philofophers believed that Churches were confecrated only to Dæmons that had been Men. They had the fame No. tion of Images, Trismegistus faith, That Men

Men having invented the Art of making Gods, did call in Invocation the Souls of Damons, to put them into those boly Imagies, and that by this Means the Idols, Idola, have Power to do Good or Evil. Note that in this Place, Idol and Image are the fame thing. As for the Sa-, crifices and Ceremonies, we have feen that Apuleius reckons them among the Honours rendred to Damons of. the fecond Order, that is, which had been Men. He doth not tell us with what Form of Worship the others must be ferved, tho' he declares that they are religiously to be honour'd. Hear how how he fpeaks of what is due to the Celeftial Gods and to Dæmons; " All the Celeftial Gods do always en-" joy the fame eternal Equality, the " fame Temper of Spirit, which never " exceeds its Bounds, either towards " Grief or Pleasure: God cannot be " subject to any Commotion, either of " Action or of Love; he can neither " be transported with Anger, nor "moved with Pity; he is freed from " all Paffions, he can neither mourn "nor nor rejoyce, &c. But all these, and all 66 " things of this kind belong to Dæ_ " mons, who are in a middle Ele_ " vation; they are as we, capable of " being provok'd and appeas'd; they ".can be angry and compaffionate ; Men " may obtain their Favour by Offerings, " foften them by Prayers, and provoke " them by Injuries, Go. And for this " Reafon, we are to receive with Faith "the divers Observations of Religion, " the Devotions of facred Ceremonies " and Sacrifices. The Meaning is, that if Men had respect only to the Celeftial Gods, who can be sensible of nothing, there would be no need of all the Ceremonies of Religion ; they should be honour'd, according to Trifmegistus's Opinion, by pure Obedience and Thankfgiving : But that by reason of the Variety, which the Dæmons are capable of all those Religious Ceremonies must be observed, whereby Men do endeavour, either to appeafe them, or to get Favours from them. Whereupon it should be noted, that the Celestial Gods, who were Damons before, having not quite H put put off their Nature and former Affections, were, according to Plutarch's Opinion, to be ferved both as Gods and as Dæmons, that is with a mixt Worfhip, honouring them with Hymn, and Praises, as Plato teaches ; it is like_ wise requisite to build them Temples, to offer Sacrifices to them to pleafe them, to keep clofe to the Ceremonial Obfervations of Religion, as it is practifed in the Worship of Dæmons. Seeing therefore, that the Multitude of Gods which the Heathen worship'd in their Images, with Sacrifices and other Religious Services, were either Damons Mediators, or Dæmons raifed up to Heaven, and all fuch Gods as had been Men, as appears, by the Histories of their Lives, and of their Translations: It follows, that all the Religion of the Heathen confisted in the Worship of Dead Men; and that St. Paul was in the right when he faid, That what the Heathen offered, they offered it to Demons; for thus it should be translated, and not to Devils.

Of that Place of Scripture, I Cor. X. 20. What the Heathen offer, they offer it to Devils.

HIS place of Holy Writ, being ill translated in our vulgar Tongue, fhould be here well reflected upon, "A dies tà "elun Aaspoorioss Sois à Taoep, for it should be rendred, to Damons, not to Devils; for the Apostle speaks of the Object of the Heathenish Worship, and according to the Notions of the Heathen, fince he gives it the fame Name which they did, this is very remarkable: If Reflection be made upon the Hebrew Word, which the Septuagint have translated Damons, for the Words of St. Paul, in this Place, do allude to those, Deut. 32. 17. where Moses fpeaking of the Sacrifices H 2 which which the Children of Israel offer'd to the Gods of Moab and of Midian, faith (according to the Translation of the Septuagint of the Valgate, and of Tremelius) They offered to Dæmons, not to Gods : We translated, They offered to Idols that are no Gods. The Translation of the Seventy, which St. Paul follow'd, doth Anfwer the Hebrew Text, better than the other: Schea, which both the Seventy and St. Paul, have translated Demons, hath great Affinity with the Word Scaddai, one of the Names which the holy Language gives . to God alone, to fignify that God alone is sufficient to Himself, and to all Things besides. The Septuagint have translated Sched twenty Times by the Word Vafos, which fignifies a Woman's Breft that affords sufficient Nourishment for young Children; but they have reder'd it but twice by the word Damons, viz. Deut. 38. 17. and Pf. 106. 37. the only Places wherein it is used to fignify a Form of unlawful Worship. My Obfervation is this, that the word Sched answers well to that of Demon, which without doubt was an Honourable Name given to the Object of reli-, gious Worship by the Neighbouring Nations, and particularly the Midianitas, whole Language had much Affinity with the Hebrew, as the Grecians gave the Name of Damons to them, whom they most constantly ador'd. What I infer from it, is, that it clearly appeares, that the Apostle doth here fer forth the Doctrine of the Heathen, according to their own Notions, and the Confessions of their wifest Philosophers, viz. that what they offered, they offered it to Demons; and withal to teach. Christians, who were not Ignorant what Things God had formerly condemned, and might very well be feafible of the Strength of his Allusion, that such Worship could but be very displeasing to God : whence it follows, that they were by no Means to partake of the Heathenish Sacrifices, fince by the Confesfion of those that offer'd them, they were offered to Damons, and were the fame Things which the Children of Ifrael having facrificed unto, under fuch Name as was not lefs Honourable than that of of Damons, had notwithstanding highly provoked God. By this St. Paul hath taught us thefe two Things in general, I. That the Heathen committed Sin in offering Sacrifices to any but God. 2. That Christians should have nothing to do with any religious Worship, which does not directly and immediately relate to God, and to him alone; notwithstanding all the Reasons which Men may pretend to the contrary, and the fine Names they will give to those Objects which they worship after this manner

Of the first Commandment of the Law.

HE foregoing Doctrine is taught us by the first Commandment of the Law; Thou shall have none other God, or Gods before, or upon my Face. Two things should here be taken notice of 1. That

That the' there is no other God but one, and that an Idol is nothing in World ; yet whatsoever Men set up as an Object of religious Worship, is termed God in holy Scripture, becaufe it is substituted and placed in the room of the true and only God, who ought to be the fole Object of Religion. 2. The other is, that in this Precept God speaks to Men that own him as God, and profels to worship him: He doth not forbid they should deny him, that they flould go and ferve other Gods; but he forbids particularly, they should ferve any other in his Presence, or with him; those that are guilty of the former do cast God behind their Backs, Rom. 14.9. but they that commit the the latter Crime, do still pretend to ftand in God's Presence; their Sin is, that they will have other Objects of their Devotion, before, besides and with him, Ezek. 23, &c. The Terms of the Commandment feems to point at those who place certain Objects of their Devotion betwixt God and themfelves, and as before, or upon God's Face

Face, to cover the dreadful Majefty thereof, that they may approach it with less Fear. It may be faid here, that as un. der the Law the Face of God was the Ark towards which they worfhip'd, was the only Symbole of God's Prefence, and as a Means to draw near unto him: and that as under the Law God would not that his People should have any other Object of their Devotion, but Himfelf, who fpake to them out of the Ark, nor contrive any other Way of drawing nigh to him, nor fancy any other Token of his Prefence with them: So under the Gofpel he will have no Chriftians to acknowledge none other Object of their religious Services, than the God who manifested himself in Jesus Christ, the only Mediator betwixt God and Men, nor feek after any other Means of obtaining his Grace and Favours, than the fame Jesus Christ. Disobedience to this Law, is the Error which St. Paul prophefied should prove the great Unhappinefs of the Christian Church, when he faith, That Jome Shall fall away from the Faith, giving up themselves to seducing Spirits and Doctrines of Demons. Of the Words Dæmon and Devil, and of the remarkable Difference betwixt those two Names; and of Sepulchres and Relicks.

W HY is it fay'd that the Name of Damon is lefs fearful than that of Devil, feeing that Mr. Daille observes, that it is always used to fignify an evil Thing in the Translation of the Septuagints; and that in the Book of the Asts it is used otherwise but in one Place, and that with respect to the wrong Judgment which the Heathen made of it? To this will be answer'd, that the Word Damon hath always formed in the Mind of Christians the Idea of an Evil Thing, as representing to them either the Object of abominable I Idolatry;

Idolatry, or those Evil Spirits that are constantly called by this Name, as Origen observes, Lib. 5. ag. Celfus. It fignifies always the one or the other of thefe Things in the New Testament, even Acts 17. 18. In the Translation of the Seventy, it is used fix or feven times to the fame Purpole : we have already feen two Places where it expounds a Word fignifying a forbidden Worship, Pf. 96. 5. It shews the Signification of the Word Elilim, which we translate Idols, and Ifa. 56. 11. to expound the Word Gad, which we tender the Hoft of Heaven; in both which Places, mention is made of false Divinities. Befide these, the Seventy likewise used the Word Damon, to explain the Hebrew Word Sebhirim, I/a. 13. 21. which we translate Bugbears, and it fignifies a kind of Wild Beaft or Night Bird, apt to fright Folks, and which were to shelter themselves in the Rains of Babylon, after it was deftroy'd; and Isa. 34. 14. to expound the Word Thijim, which fignifies the Wild Beafts which were to: repair to the Ruins of Bofra. The moff most constant Use of the Word Damon. hath been to represent those Animals of a Middle Nature, betwixt God and Man, which we call Anels, and were fo named by the Heathen themfelves in Asclepio. Christians have called Evil Angels Damons, and to the good they have given the Name of Angels only. Those among the Heathen, who ac. knowledged Evil Damons, called themfelves Cacodaimonas, and mischievous Angels; but with them the Name of Demon was constantly an honourable Name, which they gave to the Nobleft Objects of their religious Worship: whenfoever the Scripture makes use of it to express an Object of Religion, it always intimates a false Object, and Christians look upon it with Abhor. rence; but the Heathen notwithstanding, have taken this Name, in their Senfe, for the Name of a Thing worthy of their Veneration, fo that when in Scripture it fignifies an Object of Adoration, it is taken in bonum partem, for a Venerable Name, with respect to the Judgment that the Heathen made T 2 made of it; but it founds ill in the Ears of Christians. It is not only Acts 17. that it is used to fignify a good Thing, but also 1 Cor. 10. and it cannot be taken in another, Rev. 9. 20. according to the Notion of the Worshippers there spoken of, tho' we translate it by the Word Devils, according to our Notion. I fay therefore, that the Word Damon doth reprefent to Christians none but odious Objects ; yet it could not, at least in St. Paul's Time, inspire so great an Horror as that of Devils; for, observe in the first Place, that in the Greek Tongue, then fpoken every where, and underftood by every Body, the Word Demon fignifies Learned, whereas Devil fignifies a falfe Accufer. Secondly, none ever imagined that the Word Devil fignified any thing that was good : but the Name Damon was efteem'd by most as very Venerable; in a conftant Conversation among Men; and using, as they do, fome Words which they diflike not, leffens very much the Averfion we might otherwife have for them, tho' at this time we do not

diffinguish them, and we look upon the Names of Devils and Damons to be Synonymous, tho' the one comes out eafier than the other : we observe likewise in reading the Holy Scripture, that the Word Devil is always without any Title or Adjunct, which can intimate any difference between the Things to which this Name is given; but the Name Demon is fometimes used with Diftinction, which implies that this Name may be given as well to good as to Evil Things, as Lake 4. 33. The Spirit of an unclean Damon, or as it is in some Copies, An impure Damon. 1

Two notable Differences there are betwixt these two, first that the Holy Scripture applies the Word Demon both in the Singular and in the Plural Number, to the same Things : But tho' the Word Devils is three times used in the Plural Number, to fignify such Persons as are given to flandening, yet never but in the Singular to fignify the Evil Spirit : This shews that the Scripture will not confound these two Names

as we do, and the Things which are represented by them. The first Place where we meet with the Word Sielon Devil, according to the Septuagint's Translation, is in the beginning of the Book of Job, where we find it twelve times in two Chapters, and always to expound the Word Satan, which is the Name of that wicked Spirit that flander'd Job, and would deftroy him. The first place in the New Testament is in St. Matthew, when he tempted our Saviour; St. Lake calls the Tempter the Devil and St. Mark names him Satan ; which clearly fhews that he who tempted Christ, is the fame that accused Job. The fame doubtless who defired to fift the Apostles as Wheat, who inspir'd Judas to be a Traitor, that filled Ananias and Sapphirah's Heart, this is the great Dragon, the old Serpent, called the Devil; and Satan the Accuser of the Brethren, the fame that feduced Eve : the fame Satan in Hebrew, and Devil according to the Seventy, who withftood the High-Priest Jehofbuah, and who is represented contending for the Body of

of Moses, Jude. 9. from whole Power Men are delivered by the Preaching of the Gospel; in one Word, who had the Empire of Death, and whom Chrift hath overcome by his Death. This Word Seageres is not found in the Greek Heathenish Authors to fignify a Spirit, or any other particular Thing: And I do not think that the Heathen knews this great Accuser, Adversary, and general Enemy of Mankind, which we call the Devil : They that believ'd wicked Damons, never gave them this Name, neither was it given to that evil God, the Author of all Evil, whom fome, tho? but few, did affirm to ftand in oppolition to the Almighty and good God, but whom they never look'd upon as an envious, jealous Spirit, to accuse Men before God, and endeavouring by all manner of Ways and Means to destroy them. We have no Knowledge of this Spirit called the Devil, and Satan, but. by the Revelation of God's Word: it. fhould be observ'd therefore, that the Holy-Scripture speaking of Damons, that were the Object of the Heathenish Worfhip.

Worship, names them often in the Plural Number, according to the Notions of those Idolatrous Nations, but never of the Devil, or Satan, the true Cause of Man's Fall; but as of one to whom is attributed the Seduction of the World, and of the Nations, the Original of Mens Inclinations to do Evil, and opposing God's Grace and Man's Happiness.

The second Difference to be taken notice of is, that the Scripture never gives the Name of Damon to any living Man, but that of Devil, and Satan to feveral, as to Hadad, I Kings I. 14. to Rezon, Ver. 23. 25. to St. Peter, Matt. 16. 23. in the fame Senfe that David called Abiscai by the fame Name. 2 Sam. 19. 22. these Men are called Satan, the Name of the most fearful and cruel Enemy and Adversary of Mankind to express the greatness of the Injury. they offered by their Oppositions and Contradictions. In St. John 6. 70. it. is faid of Judas, that he was a Devil, in in the fame Senfe that this Name is given to Hammon by the Septuagint, Heft. 17. 4. and chap. 3. ver. 1. where we find the Hebrew Word Isar, which fignifies a violent Oppressor: the Reason of this is, that the Devil or Satan is a real and true Being, and most wicked of all Creatures; and the Holy Scrip. ture will have us to understand that all those are like him to whom it gives this Name; whereas the Damons, honour'd by the Heathen, have no real Existence, and the Holy Ghost would not give the Names of Things that have no Being but in Imagination, to those Persons whose real Qualities were to be declar'd and fet forth.

I conceive, that it will be objected, that the Demons of the Heathen were real Things, fince what was worfhiped under that Name, were the Souls of dead Men, and that fome did alfo understand by the fame Name, them th at we call Agels. To this I answer that both Angels and the Souls of dead Men, are indeed real in themselves, but K '

as to that Mediation, the Knowledge of Human Affairs; the Power of commanding, of defending, of communicating good thins Ge. and above all, that adorable Devinity attributed to them by their Worshippers, they were nothing in truth. St. Paul faith it expresly, I. Cor. 84. and Chap. 10. 19. I know that he fpeaks there of Idols, that is, of Images confecreated in the Heat thens Temples, for this is the Meaning of the Word Idol, even in Apuleius in Asclepieo. But the Apostle doth not consider those Images in themselves, that either in their Matter or Form, for that was something, but with respect to what they were in the Imagination of I. doliters, who believed that they reprefented fo many Divinities; that they were not fimple Statues, but Images full of Spirit, that wrought Wonders, and knew Things to come, did foretell them by Dreams or otherwife, and caufed Diseases to fall upon Men, and. cured them afterwards : Holy Images, into which Men having found the Art of making Gods, did introduce the the Souls of Damons, or Angels: in one Word Idols, Idola, which alone had the Power of doing Good or Evil. And do you not find here all that is faid now of the Images of Lauretta, and feveral other Places. With refpect to this, St. Paul faith, that the Idol is nothing in the World; because that what they would have it to be, is no more than the Vertue ascribed to it; that there is no God; but One and what the Gentiles did offer, they offered it to Damons, not to God; and Damons where nothing but imaginary Divinities.

We gather from both these Differences, that tho' the Heathenish Opinion concerning Damons, and that which was to be in vogue among Christians conformably thereunto, had the Devil for their Author; yet in that Place St. Paul's Meaning is not that they were Doctrines of Satan, or of the Devil, of whom he makes no mention, nor Doctrines inspired by Devils: there being but one only Devil, whom the Apostle K 2 would would have named in the Singular Number, fince he is never spoken of otherwife in the whole Bible ; nor yet Doctrines fuggested by Damons, which were nothing: But that they were Opinions which Men would hold concerning the Worship of Dead Men, anfwerable to them which the Heathen had conceived of their Damons. Many Christians, faith Vives upon chap. 27. of lib. 8. St. Auft. De Civit. D. " Do Evil " in a thing that fhould be Good; they " Honour the Saints, both Men and "Women, after the fame manner that " they ferve God : and I perceive not "what may be the Difference in many " things betwixt the Opinion they have " of the Saints, and what the Gen-" tiles thought of their Gods.

As touching the Offices attributed to Damons, I will tell you that they are fet forth by Plato, Apuleius, Plutarch and Celfus, in the forenamed Places, and that all these Authors do add here to the Testimonies of Hesiodus in his Poem, whose Title is, Of the Works of Days.

Days. Plato, in lib. Legum 11. afcribes to Vulcan and Pallas, the Protection of the Workmen who labour'd in Things pertaining to Life; to Mars and Pallas that of Smiths, who made offenfive and defenfive Weapons, and fays that one God is over one thing, and another over another thing. See Arnobius, lib. 3. Voffus de Idol. Gentium, lib. 1. c. 7. The Veneration of Sepulchres and Relicks is allow'd in the Heathenifh Authors; you will find it particularly in lib. 5. of Plato's Refp. and in Cicer. lib. 2. Legum. 78 A TREATIS

That there is but one Devil, or Satan; and of the Angels ∫poken of, Rev. ix. II. xii. 7. 2 Cor. xii. 7. Jud. v. 6. 2 Pet. ii. 4.

Hat there is but one Devil, feems to be both a bold and falfe Affertion, fince Scripture speaks of several Angels that finned in the beginning, and of Angels of Satan; yet the Scripture that tells us that there is a Devil, or Satan, never speaks but of one only, to whom it ascribes the Seduction of Man, and all the Malignity tending to his-Deftruction. I know that the contrary Opinion is the most common among mong Chriftians, and I do not look upon it as dangerous to condemn them that hold it; but I fay, that it doth not feem to have any F ondation in God's Word; and I believe, they have it from fome other Place.

We have feen that among the Hea. then fome believed that there were wicked Damons, whom they called Cacodamons, and mischievous Angels: the same Opinion was among the Jews, after they were divided into feveral Sects. The Sadduces believed neither Refurrection, nor Angels, nor Spirits: But the Pharifees, who had better Credit with the People, and who did all that they could, to deftroy the Sadduces, did omit nothing to establish the Opinion of Spirits; they follow'd the Notions of the Heathen concerning Damons, and called Damon and Spirit, every thing that diffurbed Men in any extrordinary Manner: The fame Notion is crept in alfo among Chriftians; and it is commonly believed, that Satan was an Angel of Light, the chief and head of many others, others, whom he drew with him into the fame Rebellion, and doth still act against Man by his Order. But where is it faid in Scripture, that Satan was an Angel, that he was the head of Angels, and his Troop follow'd him in his Rebellion? It may be they will quote that Place, Rev. 9. 11. where St. John speaks of the Angel of the Bottomless Pit. But belides that, this Book contains Prophesies, on which no certain Principle can be grounded. St. John sufficiently difcovers in the first Chapters, that by the Word Angels he understandeth Men fent ; and according to his Interpretation, I believe that this Angel of the Abyfs, called in Hebrew Abbadon, and in Greek Appollyon, is a Man whom God hath fent in his Anger to confound and deftroy Men. If we confider well the Locusts, whereof this Angel of the Abyfs, is the King, we shall perceive without much to do, that it is a Man who is the Head of Men, come from the Depth of Error and Confusion, to torment other Men after a cruel manner; and I know none with whom this agrees 2.01/10 agrees better than the Head of the Fryars, and of the Inquisition. The Angels of the Dragon who fought with him againft Michael and his Angels, Rev. 12. 7. are also Men; the Ministers of Satan that feduce and torment the World, they fight against Jesus Christ the Head of the Church, and against his Minifters, and the eternal Fire is prepared for them, as well as for him that lent them, Mat. 25. 4. That Angel of Sa= tan who troubled St. Paul, was a falfe Teacher, an Apostate that stuck close to him, to keep him from reft; I believe it was Alexander the Copper-Smith, who had done him much Evil, I Tim. 1.20.

It will be alledged further, that St. Jude ver. 6. speaks of those Angels who kept not their Estate, as we render it: But you cannot find there that Multitude of Spirits commanded by Satan, and Partakers of his Rebellion; nothing but Prejudice can there find Angels, who never were Angels. The Holy Ghost, who never gives but fit and proper Names, doth never call Angels, but such as were fent upon some Errand or other.

The

The Spirits supposed to have follow'd Satan in his Revoult from the beginning of the World, had not yet been fent of God ; and if St. Jude meant it of them, he reprefents them bound with Chains from that time, fo that they could not never fince be either Angels or Messengers. If you read the Apostle's Discourse without Prevention, you will find that the common Explication doth not allow him a very exact Way of Reasoning; his Defign is to perswade Christians to maintain conftantly the Good Fight of Faith, and not fuffer themselves to be carried away by the Examples of those, who turning the Grace of God, into Wantonnefs, have renounced the only Lord Tefus Chrift our God and Saviour; and his Argument to this Purpofe is the Fear of God's Judgments, whereof he mentions here three notable Examples. 1. That of the Children of Ifrael, who after their Deliverance from Egypt believ'd not, and where deftroy'd; this was known by the Hiftory. 2. The Hiftory of the Rebellion that appear'd

after

after the Return of them that were fent to fpy the Land of Canan. 3. Here is set down for a third Example, Sodom and Gomorrah, whereof likewife the Hiftory was well known, and often fpoken of by the Prophets: for the fecond is reckoned the Punishment of those Angels that rebell'd with Satan in the beginning of the World, and who are referved under Darkness, in Bonds, of which no mention is made in any Part of the Scriptures; and that Example, till then unknown, was no ftrong Argument, to ftir up the Spirits, neither could it be conveniently joined with the reft. Let no Body alledgehere Tradition, or fome Book that is loft; for befides that, what depends upon Tradition, and may be faid of the laft Books, is very uncertain; it is unlikely that St. Jude would have placed betwixt two Examples, fo well known by the holy Hiftory, another Example, whereof no mention at all is made in the facred Oracles committed to the Jews, and faithfully preferved by them. Let me ask here, L 2

Wha

What obliged Interpreters to translate the Word dexir, by this first Estate, or Original ? except it was the Defire of finding here, that Fall of many Angels or Spirits, which is found no where elfe, and whereof Men are fo eafily perfwaded, I know not how nor wherefore. The Vulgate translates Principalities, which doth not agree very well with a Troop of Spirits under the command of a Head. If you mark well the Context, and the Terms which the Apostle makes use of, you will easily discover here the Men sent to view the Land of Canan, Numb. 13. 3. who. were the Chief of every Tribe, and heads of the Children, "Agxnvoi, and who. did not observe on that Occasion, what was becoming that Rank and Dignity they were in among their People; therefore they loft it with their Lives, Numb. 14. 37. St. Jude charges them with a double Crime, That they upheld, or maintained not their Dignity. that is they shew'd not that Courage and Refolution which became the Heads, of the People, and then to have left ('Amohimovtai to" (Slov 'cikatúpiar,) their Habitation, or the Country that belonged to them; that is they renounced it, they gave over the Defign of entring into it : This marks exactly the Perfons I am speaking of.

These may also be discover'd in 2 Peter 2. 4. there it is faid, That God fpar'd not the Angels that finned; for thefe Words, that finned, do directly point at those of St. Paul. Heb. 3. 17. Who finned, and whole Carcasses fell in the Wilderness, and to whom the Lord swore, that they should not enter into his Reft. These are the very Men who rebell'd, when they were upon the Point of entring into that Land which had been spied out for them immediatly before. It is true, that what St. Peter faith may be applied to all those, who being fent by God, do rebel against his Commandment; but there is not in the Scripture any Ex., ample fo remarkable of a Rebellion of Men fent of God, as of these that were with wet wet with a 201 were fent to fpy the Land of Canan. This Rebellion did highly provoke God, fince he punished it with the greatest Severity-

You will ask perhaps, Whether Men fent by Men may be called An. gels ? which Title feems to belong only to God's Meffengers. I answer, that those who were fent to spy the Land, were fent by God, fince they were fent by his Orders, who had marked their very Persons, Numb. 13. 3. I must add, that belides the frequent Use of this Word Angel in profane Authors, there is nothing more usual in the Greek Translation of the old Testament than this Word, to fignify Meffengers Sent by Men. Thus were they call'd, whom Jacob fent to his Brother Esau, Gen. 32. 3. So were they, whom Moles fent to the King of Edom, Numb. 20. 4. Those of Josbua in the Tent of Acham, Josb. 7. 2. Those of Gideon to Ephriam, Judges 7. 24. This Expression is not unknown to the New Testament ; you meet with 30 no local s to sil statute of oil it; time of the as of their pirat Sind.

it, Acts 12. 15. Jam. 2. 25. where the two Men fent by Joshua to spy Jerico, are called Angels. After this you will not think it strange that both St. Peter and St. Jude should give the same Names to those whom Moses sent to view the the Land of Canan.

Of the Dæmons or Spirits which our Saviour caft out; and of the Spirits of Python.

IT is a notable Queftion how those Spirits may be called which possessed Men in the Days of Chrift's Flesh, and the Spirit of Python : Thefe should by no means be called Devils, fince the holy. Scripture doth not call them fo, and that it fpeaks but of one Devil. But we may call that which tormented Men at that Time, Damons or Spirits, because the Scripture doth often give them those Names. I know that fome will fay, that if they were Spirits and Damons, they must be evil Spirits and evil Damons, and therefore they may be called Devils, who attended the Service of Satan, as Head of the Evil

Evil Spirits, and fo they may be call'd Devils: But let it be remember'd, that I have not defined what they were, but I have told you how I might call them, according to the Scripture, which speaks Mens Language, and names Things as Men were wont to name them. God's Word doth readily call Damons the Ob. jects of the Heathens Adoration, becaufe the Nations call'd them fo, tho' those Objects were but imaginary Things. The Scripture calls Bahal, that is, Lord and Master, that Idol whose Worship was introduced in Israel in the Days of King Ahab, because the Worfhippers of it termed it fo; tho' it was nothing in the World, no more than Damons were: And fo, because the Names of Diemons and Spirits were commonly given to those Things which vexed and difturb'd Men, the Holy Scripture doth without Difficulty give them the fame Names (a). There was nothing more common among the Jews, than to afcribe to evil Spirits the most troublefome Evils, especially those whereby the Body was tortur'd with Violence, and the Spirit agitated with Phrenfies: " The Madmen, faith Vives, and the " Furious, were called Damons by the " Gentiles; and the Passions wherewith " we are transported, are called Damons, " by feveral Platonicans." I may fay therefore that those Spirits or Demons, from which Christ delivered Men, were Phrensy, Epilepsy, Madnefs, Lunacy, Melancholy, and the like; yea, perhaps but an extraordinary Fever; for all these were Damons and Divinities among the Heathen (b). They were not fuch in Truth; but, as I have noted, the Scripture fpeaks with the Vulgar, and doth not name Things otherwife than they were wont to be named: But if we take Notice of feveral Things to which the Scripture giveth the Name of Spirit, it will appear, that they were only the Humours and Affections whereby Men are proved to be of fuch Temper and (a) Disposition. That other Spirit which guided Caleb, Numb. 14. 24. was nothing else but his Faith and Courage opposed to the Incredulity and Cowardline/s of his Companions. That Spirit which made Sennacherib to return into his Country, was the Fear that feiz'd on him at the Sight of the dead Bodies that were flain in his Camp by the Angel. That new Heart and new Spirit that God commanded his People should have, Ezek. 8. 31. are certainly new Sentiments and new Affections. The Spirit of Fornication, spoken of by the Prophet, Holea 4. 12. is the Pallion of that Vice. When our Saviour told the two Sons of Zebedee, Luke 9. 55. Ye know not what Spirit they are of; it was to let them understand that they knew not the Nature of that Affection, which made them fpeak as they did. That Spirit of Slum. ber spoken of Isaiab 29. 10. and Rom. 11. 8. is nothing elfe but that natural Stupidity to which God abandoneth Men.

In whom he will not fhew the Power of his Grace. The Spirit of Meekness, 1 Cor. 4. 21. and the Meekness of Spirit are one and the fame Thing. To walk by the fame Spirit, 2 Cor. ch. 12. v. 8. is to act according to the Suggestions of the fame Affection. What our Saviour faith, Matt. 12. 43. of the unclean Spirit, who being gone out of his House, and finding it swept and garnished, doth return with seven other Spirits worse than himself, is a Parable occafion'd by the ordinary Way of Discourse among the People, and which can by no Means be underftood of that fort of Spirits in question; but is eafily understood, without Violence offer'd to the Words of Vice, from which a Man guilty before hath abstain'd for a Time, but without the true Application of bimself to Virtue; so that the Affection of that Vice returning, holdeth the Place with greater Power and Empire than before ; and proves them accompany'd with many others that will not fail to follow. St. Peter hath written a Commentary upon this Parable, 2 Pet. 2.- 20. " That if after having escaped the Pollutions of, " the

" the World, through the Knowledge " of the Lord and Saviour Jefus Christ, if " they be again intangled and overcome, " the laft State of fuch is worfe than " the first." For what is faid, faith the Jefuit Maldonat, that he goeth and taketh to himsfelf seven other Spirits worse than himself; that fignifies nothing elfe than this, That if the honeft Men do lose their Honesty, by despising the Divine Grace, they commonly become the worst of Men; as if instead of one unclean Spirit that was in them before, seven more were come in.

All this being well confider'd, none will think it a ftrange Thing that Difeafes and corporal Affections, fuch as I noted before, be called after the common Notion Damons and Spirits, yea unclean Spirits, evil and wicked Spirits, no more than to fee the Name of wicked Spirit given to Jealoufy, Numb. 5. 14. To Infidelity, Judg. 9. 23. To Fury, which tormented Saul from Time to Time, and which was quieted by the Sound of Mufical Instruments, 1 Sam. 16. 14, 23. To. the Diftemper of the Woman that had, been bound eighteen Years, Luke 13. 11. This Exposition is fo much the more, probable, that the Damoniacks are named among the Difeafes which our Saviour cured: They brought unto him (faith St. Matthew 4. 24.) those that were sick, of divers' Diseases and Torments, as Damoniacks, Lunaticks, and Paraliticks, and he cured them all. By these Cures our Saviour justified, that he was the Meffiah promifed, and of whom thefe Things were prophefied. Therefore St. John the Baptist being in Prison, and having fent to him two of his Disciples to ask him, whether he was indeed he that was come, or whether they fhould look for another; he cured before them feveral Perfons of divers Difeafes and Plagues, and of evil Spirits, and gave Light to many that were blind, Luke 21. 22. After this he spake thus to them, Go, and tell John what Things ye have seen and heard; the Blind see, the Lame walk, the Lepers are cleansed, the Deaf hear, the Dead. are raifed up, and the Poor have the Gospel preached 1-01 preached unto them. To this End, that John should make them understand, by the Conformity of what they had feen with the Prophecies, that he was truly the Meffiah promised, Isa. 35. 56. and Chap. 61. ver. 1, 2. here is to be noted, and not lightly, that though the poffeffed with Damons are mention'd among them that John's Disciples faw cured, yet they are not named in the Prophecy that went before ; which shews that they must be comprehended under the Names of the Difeases mention'd in that Prophecy, and that is but a new Name given, according to the common Usage of that Time, to such Distempers as the Prophets had named otherwife. For this should be carefully remember'd, that it was not the Greatness of the Miracles which proved Chrift to be the Meffiah, but chiefly because the Miracles which he did were the fame that it was foretold he fnould do : But we do not find that it was prophefy'd that he should cast out Damons or Spirits out of Mens Bodies, but that he should cure all Manner of Diseases; which makes makes it plain, that these Demons or Spirits, from which he deliver'd Men, were Difeases : And indeed Lunacy, or Epilepsy, whose Fits do follow the Course of the Moon ; and fuch as tormented the Child, Matt. 17. 15. are natural Distempers, and yet it is faid, that when Chrift cur'd him, he rebuked the Damon which went out, and he was healed, ver. 18. and was not the Demon and the Sicknefs the fame Thing? and it is faid, that he rebuked the Damon in the fame Senfe that he rebuked the Fever that afflicted St. Peter's Mother-in-law, Luke 4. 30. We find in other Places, that they were amazed to see how he commanded with Authority and Power the unclean Spirits, and they went forth ; that is in the fame Senfe, that after having faid rebuked the Wind and the Sea, be thou still, they faid one to another, Who is that? even the Wind and the Sea do obey him.

Those Distempers, that were called Damons and Spirits, were such as distracted Mens Minds, and obstructed their Senses, and by Consequence discover'd cover'd another Spirit, than that they had, or should have, or a quite contrary Difpolition. As I know at this Time a Gentleman very exemplary for his Piety, Modesty, and an unblameable Behaviour with all Men; yet in the Fits of a Diftemper which has feiz'd upon him but fince three or four Years, among other Extravagancies, he feldom utters one Word but you would think that the unclean Spirits of the World have all taken Poffession of this Man. Therefore the Jen's expressed that Extravagancy wherewith they charged out bleffed Saviour, and were not contented to fay that he was out of his Senfes, but that he was, or were possels'd with a Demon, Job. 12.20. and thus they ex plain themfelves afterwards, faying that he was belides himfelf. Siguiditer "ezer is wat relos. In this Sence the Diemoniack, Mark 5. 1. and Luke 8. 28. agitated with fo many Extravagancies, might well anfwer, that their Name was Legion, fince the Variety of their foolifh Actions made them believe that they were possessed with feveral Demons. our SAVIOUR, Matthew 8. 28. and that he or they could not be bound : this is natural, when a ftrong Man is transported with Fury; he went naked, and dwelt in no House ; but when be he had broken his Bonds, faith St. Luke, he was carried by the Damon into the Wildernefs, that is, by his Folly and Madnels; fince he must first be loofed of his Bonds before he could be carried. He was continually, Night and Day, in the Mountains, and in the Tombs, (a furious Fellow, fo that none durft pals that way : he cryed, and cut himself with Stones; enough to fhew that he was in Tormenting Pains, for that's the Meaning of the Word saupondrey or that he had Damons, as St. Lake faith, or many Evil Spirits, according to the Peoples Notion; yea, according to the Stile of the Scripture, as I have noted. But with this difference, that by Spirits, the Scripture understandeth nothing else but the feveral Affections and Dispositions of the Soul, whether good or bad; whereas the Heathen did believe, that Virtue and Vice, yea and Sickness too, were foreign Spirits which disturbed the Spi-

Spirits of Men, and they look'd upon them as Divinities; for as Cicero witneffeth, De Nat. deorum. lib. 3. there were none but Tertian and Quartan Agues, that were not Honoured as Gods.

Galielmus Adar (a) a learned Physician, (Ennar. 5.) hath observed, that all the Symptoms of Madness mark'd by the Evangelists, were exactly the same with them of the Lycantrophia, which makes a Man think himself posses'd with a Devil, or turned into something that he is not. Among the Heathen some thought themselves posses'd with Dæmons, and this Man fansied that he had many. He was in the Country of the Gergescenes, faith St. Matthew, or Gadarenes, faith St. Mark, and St. Luke hath Gadara, and the Gergescenes being upon the some Coast, not far the one from the

There were Jews in those Parts, fince our Saviour went thither, who was not fent but to the last House of Israel; but there was fome Heathen alfo, fince they had Herds of Swine, which had been a Crime in the Jews, as Lightfoot proves at large (a). This Lycantrope then might be either an Heathen or a Fem, he had those Heathenish Notions of Damons and Evil Spirits. I have already observ'd, that these Opinions did pass from the Heathen to the Jews, and might be common in a place most inhabited by Heathens. It was alfo an Opinion commonly receiv'd and grounded upon their Oracles (b), and on the Authority of fome Philosophers, (c) That the Damons were subject to the Chastifements of the great Gods; which Chastisement, in all likelihood, was to be at the end of the World : And this the Heathen were not Ignorant of, which made David to fing, That the Lord is great and terrible to the Gods; for his

Meaning is that the Lord, who is the supreme God, whose Chastilements the Damons (who are the Gods of People) are afraid of, Pf. 96. The Lord is dreadful above all Gods of the (a) Nations, as Elilim, vain Things. The Seventy have translated it Demons, in Pf. 6. 94. and Idols, I Chron. 16. 25. But when he faith that Damons do believe and tremble, he speaks to the Heathen converted to the Truth of One only God; and yet fancied that to be faved, it was not neceffary to renounce their vicious Affections, provided they worfhipped but one only God. The Apostle tells them, That this was not fufficient to make them Happy, because that according to the Pagan Doctrine, which they had lately parted with ; and David d d take Notice of the Damons Wor. fhipped by them, who believed and confessed by their Oracles, that there is but One fovereign God, which, not with ft and. ing, doth not make them Happy, fince that according to the fame Opinion, the Dæmons do tremble, knowing themfelves to be subject to the Correction of this Supreme God. This Place of St. James doth certainly allude to that of David, who never meant that the Damons were a real Thing, but that they were fomething in others Opinion. This furious Man, now in question, being poffefs'd with this Notion, thought he must not speak, but in the Persons of those Damons, which he fancy'd to be in him ; and having heard that Jefus was the Son of God, and that he did cast Damons out of Mens Bodies, doth look upon him with Fear, as the Son of God come to punish him; wherefore he prays him not to punish him before the Time; that is, before the End of the World, or before the Time appointed for the general Punishment of Demons.

Some Difficulties may be thought to be in this; as, 1. That it may be ask'd, How these Domons knew, that Jesus was the Son of God? We may answer, that they

they knew it by the common Report; which taught it the blind Man in the Way, Matt. 9. 27. It may be objected, in the fecond Place, that the Damons themselves did cry out, that Jesus was the Christ the Son of God, and that our Saviour forbad them to publish it : But I fay, that the Damons are named for the afflicted Perfons; for St. Mark tells us, Chap. 3. 11, 12. that when the unclean Spirits faw him; they fell down and cry'd; for it was not the Spirits, but the Men tormented with them, did fee, and cried, and fell down. If Christ forbad those Men to tell who he was, it is becaufe he would not have it publickly known as yet; by the fame Reafon that he commanded the Leprous that he had cleanfed, the blind Man he had made to see, yea, his very Disciples, viz. St. Mark hath-it, Chap. 3. ver. 12. That they should not make it known.

But the great Difficulty lies in this, that the Damoniack called himfelf Legion, and pray'd, that they might enter into the Herd of Swine, which being granted.

ed, the Hogs caft themselves headlong into the Sea; all which cannot be supposed to be the mere Effect of a bodily Disease, or of a diftemper'd Mind. Yet what foever the Difficulty may be, it cannot oblige us to acknowledge feveral evil Spirits that come from without to torment Men's Bodies; on to fay with Josephus, lib. 7: Belli Jud. c. 15. That these vexations Spirits were the Souls of wicked Men that died unconverted : A Notion which Justin Martyr liked fo well, that he made it an Argument of Subliftence of the Soul after Death, Apol. 2. And truly were we to find a Troop of Spiritual Guards for Sa tan, and incorporeal Angels, I would not seek further than the Damned Souls who hate God and every Thing that is acceptable to him: But my Opinion iss that the Departed Souls of wicked Men, are all like the rebellious Messengers spoken of by St. Jude, referved under Darknefs in Chains; or, as St. Peter hath. it, funk with Chains of Obscurity and kept in Prison, until the Judgment of the great Day, 2 Pet. 2. 4. and fo they can do no Harm to any Man living; for certain it is, that thofe those spoken of both by St. Peter and St. Jude, are in no Condition to hurt any Body whatfoever, be they mere Spirits or departed Souls; and so whatsoever is thus aferibed to Spirits or Departed Souls, is pure Imagination. I affirm therefore, that the Torments from which our Saviour deliver'd Men, were the Effects of bodily Difeases, or Distractions of Spirit, and wherein the Devil acts none otherwise than he did in those grievous Distempers wherewith Job was afflicted. This further appears by what our Saviour faith, Luke 13. 16. concerning the Woman that had the Spirit of Infirmity, which kept her bow'd down eighteen Years. It was doubtless a bodily Diftemper, proceeding from natural Causes; for our Saviour in curing her faid no more than this, Thou art loofed from thine Infirmity; yet he faith likewise, that Satan had kept her bound eighteen Tears : So that if any evil Spirit had a Hand in these, it was but one, viz. Satan or the Devil : Wherefore the Saviour of the World tells them, That if he did cast out Damons by Beelzebub the Prince Prince of Damons, then Satan did caft out himself; supposing that there was but one Satan that might be the Caufe of all those Diftempers called Damons, which could not be cured by the Authority or Power of Satan; or elfe satan must cast out himself, or be divided against himself: And if the Devil was the Tormenter of this Damoniack, he might alfo ask Leave to drown the Swine: One Devil might as well drive one whole Herd of Swine, as one Spirit could be a lying Spirit in the Mouth of four hundred of Ahab's Prophets, I Kings 22. 6-22. But the Truth is, that this poor Man was troubled with a fore Diftemper; and the Hogs, by God's Providence, might be ftruck with the fame, or with fome other, more natural and peculiar to them : And it is no more incredible that the Diftemper of this Madman should pass into the Hogs, than that Naaman's Leprofy did stick to Gehazi.

But this Story of the Gospel is tooremarkable to be difmiss'd without farther ther Reflection. And if any Body hath the Curiofity of feeing lively Examples of the fame fort of Madnefs, let him but repair to Bethlehem, or let him enquire of the Governors of that Hospital, who is well fatisfy'd that there is none there poffessed with a Devil; and yet many are ftrong enough to break Chains, or other Bonds; fo that if they had not been shut up in good Time, they had been feen running in the Streets, cutting them felves, and the like, to the Shame and Disappointment of them that undertook the taming of them; and notwichstanding all the Care taken, some will break Prifon, and make good what is faid of many mad and loofe Fellows, That they look like one broken loofe out of Bethlehem : and it is very probable, that' among the Gadarenes they had not fuch good Orders kept, but some were left to themfelves, and no Pains taken there either to ftop, or fhut them up.

2. As St. Mark is most exact in relating this Case, let us take notice of his Words concerning this Madman; O 2 and

and our bleffed SAVIOUR tells us, that seeing Jesus Christ afar off, he ran and Worshipped him ; that in the Greek Dialect, and he fell down before him to the Ground, as a Token of great Humility, a thing common enough to that fort of People, when they meet with great or learned Men, or Men in Authority. That if our Saviour faid immediately, Thou unclean Spirit get out of this Man; it was an A& of his Wildom to. give into the Madman's Sence, to comply with his Imagination, viz. to cure him; he complies with his Imagination, that there was fome great Thing which troubled him, either from within, or from without, for fuch is the ftrong Prejudice of some of them, that the more you crofs or contradict them, the worfe they are, and prove the more incurable. It may be faid alfo, that the Lord proceeded in this manner, to manifest his Power and Authority in commanding the unclean Spirits, and making them obedient to his Word ; none otherwife than if he had faid, Thou foul Difease or unlucky Infirmity, I command thee.

to depart from this Man, and afflict him no more; or as he faid to the fick of the Palfey, Stand up and walk, and fo in this Place; Be thou healed of thine Infirmity, and delive 'd of thy tormenting Pain.

3. What is there betwisst thee and me Jefus, thou Son of God; Art thou come to Torment us before the Time? This hath been fufficiently explain'd: But it should be observed that when Men have once put, a thing in their Heads, as we commonly fpeak, they fancy that all they fee or hear agreeth thereunto. The Author of the World Bewitch'd, tells us of a Woman of Francker in the Low Countries, who believ'd herfelf to be ireecoverably damned, and did not fpeak at all, because she imagined that the damned did speak. The same must be faid of the Man's Answer, My Name is Legion, for we are many. This Man having distracted Brains, imagined that his . Head was full of Damons, and therefore that the Name of Legion was a proper Name to take upon himself. And this this proves, that it was the Man himfelf who spoke, and not the Spirits within him; for our Saviour did not ask, What are your Names; but what is thy Name? in the fingular Number : and fuch was the Answer, Not our Names, but my Name is Legion; but it will be objected that it is faid, v. 15. Him that had the Legion, which feems to intimate that it was not a simple Imagination, but a Reality : yet this is no neceffary Confequence. They that relate a Story, as the Evangelists do this, relate Things as they appear outwardly, without enquiring into the Causes: we do the fame every Day, when we meet with fuch Hypocondriack Fancies, as to have fuch a living Thing within him as a Snake or a Wolf. When we fpeak afterwards of him, we fay, The Man that had the Snake or the Wolf: If we tell the Story of him that thought he had no Guts, wefay, The Man that had no Guts . yet he would be thought to affirm, that he was really in fuch a Condition.

In like manner is what is added. That the Damons befought the Lord that he would not send them into the Abys, but permit them to go into the Herd of Swine: Now, fuppoling that they were the Demons themselves that spoke this; we must then conclude that they knew. that they must go into the Deep, when they were put out of their Habitations upon the Earth, as their fettled Dwelling; a thing indeed to be wondred at, that fo many Thousands of Prisoners, (for a Legion was at least three, or fix Thousand,) should be left out of Hell to torment one or two poor human Creatures; (and he who is the King or the Judge, that will let out a Prisoner without a fufficient Reason?) And can we conceive, that the great God the Judge of Men and Angels, would give Liberty. to fuch vast Numbers to chastife one Man for a Time ; feeing especially that one alone was fufficient to put up St. Paul to it, who doubtlefs was another fort of a Man than this Demoniack.... So that it is evident that these were only the. bare Words of this poor Sufferer, when hc.

he pray'd as in the Names of feveral Damons, that they might not be obliged to return to Hell.

Befides all this, we cannot but fay that this Request of the Demons did tend to fomething elfe, than fimply to enter into the Hogs to escape the Abis for that Time, yea that short Space of Time only; for what did they get by that ? for the Hogs being drowned, what became of the Damons? Or did Chrift grant them a longer Time than they petitioned for? for tho? God gave Jacob, David and Solomon much more than they requir'd, I canhardly think that he would do the Devil fuch Kindnels. Furthermore, had they defir'd to go into the Swine only to be kept out of the Abys for a Time; How is it that they fo foon fet fire to the Place of their Refuge, and immediately deftroy'd their hospitable Hogs?

So that they cannot be Men that were poffess'd, who did unhappily fuffer Violence against their Will, and without being guilty of any apparent Crime, fince they could not prevent it; therefore these must be Criminals worthy of Death: but these were such as pretend to declare Things to come, and answer all Queftions that were put to them. But in the Hebrew, in the 17 Places that make mention of it, and in the Greek of the Septuagint, there is nothing of Python, nor P of my Belly is as the Wind that hath no Vent, it would burft like new Leather Bottles. The Greek Translation renders the Word Ob. eyyaspinuss; which lignifies one that fpeaks out of his Belly. In those fore-named Places of Leviticus, Deutronomy, Samuel, Chronicles, and Ifaiah 8. Whereas the Hebrew hath it, I Sam. 28. 7. A Woman Mifress of an Ob; the Greek faith, A Woman fpeaking out of her Belly. And it appears, from 2 Chron. 33: 6. that those Oboth's were neither Men nor Women; for translating the Hebrew, which faith, that Manasseth made an Ob, it expresses it thus, Excerce evyaspipudous, He made Things that Speak out of the Belly; and, 2 Kings 21. 6. where the fame is recorded ; and in the fame Words in the Hebrew; the Greek liath it Encoursersuity , which fignifies that Menasseth set apart some pieces of Earth, that were designed for the Ose of the Ob. son and solt the i creat

From all this we may gather, 1. That those Obe's were certain Machines made for the Use of Divination, to answer them who enquired after Things to come; and

and were cutious to know Things hard to be underftood. This appears from what is faid, that there were fome who had an Ob in their Houses, Levit. 20. 27. That a Woman was Mistrels, or in Pos-(effion of an Ob, I Sam. 28. 7. That Manaffeth made an Ob; and lastly, from what Elibu faith, Job 32. 19. That his Belly is as a new Ob that burft. 2dly. It is very probable, that these Machines or Tools were Statues, out of whole Bellies came forth, or pretended to come forth, that Voice which return'd Anfwers, when the Masters or Mistress of those Obs did fet them on work, and made them fpeak; and which fometimes did breakat the first trying of them, when they were not made of good Metal, or when their Belly was over full of Wind. This may be gathered from the Expression of the Septuagin;, and from that of Elibu: 3dly, It is evident, that by the Ufe of the Ob they pretended to enquire of the Dead : This I conclude from the Story . of Saul, I Sam. 28. and Isaiab 19. If they

they fay to you, enquire of the Ob, of the Inchanters, Mountebanks, or the like; for thus I render the Word which the Septuagint have expressed by these that speak out of the Earth, that mutter, and fend forth a dark and inward Spirit. Shall not the People enquire of their God, and go to the Dead for the Living? The Prophet teaches in this Place, that these Obes, and these Juglers, who set such Gins to work, caufing others to hear, (or imagine, that they, as from the Machine's Belly) fuch Words and Anfwers as do fatisfy the Living that enquire of the Dead. Lastly, It is indubitable that these Statues, made to receive Answers from the Dead, were fastened in the Ground : This is evident, not only because the Septuagint have twice translated the Word Ob, by these that cause their Voice to be heard out of the Earth; Tus and + yis povortas REVoloy orms : of in The nothias porovor : 25 also because the same Translators, speaking of the Ob which Manasseth made, do fay, That he consecrated pieces of Earth, 2 Kings 21.6. instead of faying that he made made an Ob. But this is clear, especially, out of Isa. 29. 4. where God faith unto Ariel, Thou shalt be brought down, thou shalt speak out of the Ground; thy Speech shall proceed softly out of the Dust, and thy Voice shall be heard as out of an Ob : But the Prophet had never spoken thus, had not the Ob been in the Ground, from whence it was heard to speak.

Some would conclude from this Expolition, that as fuch Machines were criminally invented to find out fecret and forbidden Things, the Knowledge whereof God hath referved to himfelf, Deut. 29. 29. Satan the Author of all Mischief. doth take that Opportunity to work his own Defigns, and by fuch Inftruments give fometimes true Anfwers, whereby the Owners of them obtain Credit and Power, to divert other Men from that Submission they owe to God, and that absolute Dependance they should have upon his Providence. But most certain it is, that the Devil cannot know all Things; yea, I make bold to fay, that he knows very little, at leaft in Comparifon to what the World thinks that he knows; he cannot be in feveral Places at once, fince he is supposed to go to and fro in the World, Job 1: 7: But the Truth is, that in all this there is nothing of the Devil, but the Cunning of Cheats, to amufe and deceive credulous People : And the Familian Spirit is a juggling, deceitful, a Hocus-pocus Spirit. The constant Practifers of this Art were the Heathen, who did attribute to their Diemons what foeven feemed extraoidinary, and above their Apprehenfion ; and were always ready and willing to abufe others, becaufe of the Profit they got by fuch Practifes. The Children of I/rael were also addicted to them, notwithstanding God's Prohibitions, and they used them to please a Curiofity forhidden of God. In these Actions there was a Complication of many high Crimes, which the Law judged worthy of Death. Furthermore, fince God fhew'd his Anger, and inflicts Punifhments, upon the Guilty, even at the Time of their committing 1.1

he

mitting the Sin, as in the Example of Miriam, Numb. 12. 10. of Jeroboam, 1 Kings 13. 1, 4. of Belfcathfar, Dan. 5. 5. We may fay here alfo, that God was pleased to declare unto Saul the Punishment of his Crime in speaking to an Ob; for this alfo is reckoned among the Sins for which he was rejected, and the Causes of his Death, 1 Chron. 10. 12, 13. " Saul died in his Tranfgreffion, where-" with he tranfgreffed against the Word " of the Lord, which he had not kept, " and also because he asked Counsel " of the Miftress of an Ob, feeking to " her, and had not fought unto the " Lord; therefore he flew him, and " turned the Kingdom unto David the " Son of Isaiah. Place not to be better inform'd, at to seek Arguments to maintain it. This was Saul's Cafe, being fully perfwaded that the Woman could raife the Dead, and make them declare what would befall the Living; he faid to the Woman, Foretell me by the Familiar Spirit, by Ob, and cause him to come up, whom I shall name unto thee, v. 8. The King doubtless imagined, either that there was fomething befides God, that had a Power and Knowledge of Things that should happen, or that God would difcover it to that Ob. If the former be true, Saul was no great Divine, he was far from knowing God as he ought to be known: If the latter, he must have been out of his Senses, to imagine that God refuling to difcover Secrets by fuch Persons, and in such Manner as himself had appointed Urim and Thummim, and the Prophets, he would reveal the same by such Instruments as he had so absolutely, forbidden his People

ple to make use of: fo that Saul's Au. thority in this Cafe availeth but little.

But let us examine the Thing more particularly; for the Scripture doth not tell us what the Woman did, but what fhe faw and faid : for we read, That the Woman feeing Samuel, cryed out, v. 12. It was not Samuel, as our Interpreters affirm, but an Evil Spirit in the Shape of Samuel : as indeed no true Christian can conceive, that the Devil could take up the true Body of Samuel, and transport it from Rama to Endor; and that by her Magical Art she raised up that Evil Spirit. But the Text hath not one Word to this Purpole, for it is in express Terms, that Saul defired her to raise up Samuel, that it was Samuel which the Woman faw, and that Samueb speak to Saul and frighted him. If then Syrah is (as he was) in the wrong to have believed that all that is faid there is to be understood of Samuel himself; fince Moses and the Prophets defired to be heard while they lived, bin but rife not again to fpeak unto Men, Luke 16. 31. What Reafon have we to believe that the Devil, who never was a Prophet, and never delivered to Men any Message from God, nor spake conformably to God's Word, should not appear to that Purpose, under the Form of a sanctify'd Body, referved in the Grave of Honour to the Day of the Refurrection.

But if we have (as we cannot but have) all the Reafon in the World to believe that it was not Samuel; why then is it that Samuel is named not lefs than five times? Is it that fomething appeared in the Likenefs of Samuel, to confirm Saul in his Error, who feeking none but Samuel; was to be perfwaded that Samuel ftood before him? Why not the Woman herfelf, that acted the Part of Samuel, tha fpake as if it had been Samuel, and who faid that fhe faw, him when in deed the faw nothing: Some fuch thing they will Anfwer, becaufe the Text faith, that the Woman - faw not that , that fhe faid, I fee very well ; it is faid alfo, as I noted before, that Samuel spake, and not the Devil in Form of Samuel; and that the Woman faid, I fee Gods afcending out of the Earth : which was false, for no forts of Gods abide under the Earth, no not Damons them felves; none but the Dead do remain there, as Cicero relates it, lib. 1. Tuscul. Quest. §. 26. These are his Words, "We " believe that the Souls do out-live " the Bodies, all Reafonings dolead to that " Opinion ; Reafon thould reach us alfo " where they are : And hence Igno-" rance hath taken occasion to invent " certain Places under the Earth for " them: for the Bodies falling into " the Earth and being cover'd with " Earth, (Humo, whence cometh Hu. " mari,) they believ'd that the Dead " did yet live under the Earth. Howfoever it is not faid here, that Saul (who was not in the fame Place where the Woman faw Samuel, as fhe pretended) did fee any thing; yea it is plain by the Story, that he faw nothing ; for why fhould fhould he ask the Woman, What faweft thou? And what is he like? The fame is observed by the Translators N. 27. -" Saul, fay they, knew that it was Sa-" muel, by the Disposition of his trou-" bled Senses, and the Woman's Dif-" course; but himself faw not Samuel." As for the Woman's Discourse, Was it not easy for her describe Samuel's Habit, which was fo well known? or to counterfeit his Voice out of her own Disposition, or the Conveniency of the Room fitted to that Purpofe : or as the the Engastrimuthoi we have spoken of, as if her Voice came from her Belly, or from under the Earth, or even as at a, great Diftance. The Prophecy which followeth is eafily answered, as being but a Conjecture of the Woman, and it is not well known what the meant by the Words, Thou Phalt be with me to Morrow. What, with me the true Samuel? that had given no Occasion for Fear, but rather of Joy to Saul, to go to the fame Place where holy Samuel was. But was it with me, the Devil? That must be a, Lie; 1.

Lie; unles you will fay allo, that Jonathan the Son of Saul, that was killed with him, did also go to the fame Place where the Devil was. Befides that, if you ferioully confider the Diffance of Places, and the many Things that happen'd betwixt the Time that Saul was at Endor, and the Hour of his Deaths you will confers, "as many have done that it could not be less than five Days, if not eight, as some do conjecture. This is fufficient to justify, that all this might very well come to pass, without any Commerce with the Devil, and that the Actions here mentioned, have no need of the Operation of fuch Spirits to produce them; and all this cannot make us understand what is meant by a Familiar Spirit, or a Spirit of Python; whe. ther a Man, or a Spirit, or not rather a cunning and fubtle Contrivance of a Jugler. Whofoever would fee the Meaning of the Word to Morrow, and that Saul could not have been kill'd till five Days after his Discourse with the Wo. man, let him read Becker of the World Bewitch'da Bewitch'd, Tom. 2. Ch. 24. and Tom. 3. Ch. 6. And let this be added, that as many as will understand this Story in the literal Sense, must prove, that the Hebrew Word Ob, or Obe, signifies a Spirit endued with the Gist of Prophecy; and that to do it, he must appear under some Form, or in what Figure he pleaseth, at the Wish or Command of a Woman.

Of the Word SPIRIT; of feducing Spirits; and of those Words, juftify'd in the Spirit; and of the Angels that shall be judged by the Faithful.

WHAT I have faid of feducing Spirits, is not approved by every Body, becaufe the Sence in which I take the Words, feems to be new : And yet it is not fo new as many do think. Hear what Beza faith, "By the Word Spi-"rit we may understand Damons them-"felves, or falfe Prophets, of their Doc-"trine." I have pitched on the last, according to the Liberty given me, and R I

I have done it fo much the more readily, that confulting the Observation of the Learned, I have found, that if fome Manuscripts, according to the which the New Teftament began to be printed, had Treesuan Travois, feducing Spirits; feveral others had, musi uson madiuns, Spirits of Error. I will only fet down here Mr. Amelot's Observation : " According to " the vulgar Greek, we should fay Jedu-" cing Spirits; but in three of King's " Manuscripts, in the best of Stevens's, " in those of Cardinal Ximenes, and of " the Marquis de Welex, there is, as in " our Interpreter, muduum madens, to the " Spirits of Error." This justifies my Translation to be the furer of the two; fince it may agree with both Readings of the Original; whereas the other will agree only with the vulgar Greek, : For, keeping to the Word maavois, I may tranflate, To the Doctrine, that deceive, or erroneous Doctrines; but admit the Word, shavns, it cannot be render'd otherwife, than by the Doctrines of Error. The Spirits rits of Error are either the Teachers of erroneous Doctrines, or the Doctrines themfelves; and every Body will grant, that it may more properly be faid, Giving up themfelves to Error, than giving up themfelves to Seducers, or Teachers of Error; for Men do commonly give up themfelves to Doctrines rather than to Doctors. Belides, there is not one Place in Scripture that I know of, where the Word Spirit fignifies a Teacher. They quote none other to that Purpole than this in queftion, and which ought no longer to be infifted on, after what I have faid.

But there are feveral Places where the Word Spirit fignifies Doctrine; for thus Interpreters do understand, 1 Cor. 14. 32. The Spirits of the Prophets are subject to the Prophets; as indeed this Place has Respect to the 29th Verse, Let two or three Prophets speak, and let the others judge: The Meaning can be no other, than that the Doctrines set forth by some R 2 Prophets Prophets that speak, must be subject to the Judgment of others. When St. John fays, That some Spirits are of God, and Some are not, 1 John 4. 1, 2. furely he would have us know, that there be fome Sentiments and Doctrines whereof God-is the Author, and fome others that proceed not from him : That Spirit from the Mouth of the Lord which is to destroy the Son of Perdition, 2' Thef. 2. 8. feems to me to be none other, than the Doctrine of the Gospel of Jefus Christ clearly manifested. The three unclean Spirits coming forth out of the Mouth of the Dragon, and out of the Mouth of the false Prophet, and out of the Mouth of the Beaff, Rev. 15. 13, 14. are certainly three dangerous Tenets or Opinions, which are called Spirits of Damons, to fignify, (as in the Text) the Doctrine of Damons, because all the three tend to cause dead Men to be religiously honoured, as is practifed among the Heathen, and under the Empire of the Beaft, and of the falle Prophet. This Word Spirit does fometimes exprefs the Divine Virtue working above Nature, and the Wonders that it brings forth, as you may observe in the Places under-noted (a) a Truth which cannot be deny'd; and I with that those who labour fo much to prove, that in the Church, there is not another immediate Operation of the Holy Ghoft, belides the working of Miracles, would ferioufly confider this, and confess, that there is not a greater Difficulty to admit this immediate working of Faith and Regeneration, than his Prophefying and fpeaking of Tongues; for St. Paul faying, that there is a Diversity of Gifts, but there is one and the fame Spirit, doth afcribe Wifdom, Knowledge, and Faith to the fame Spirit, as he doth to the Cure of Difeafes, prophefying, difcerning of Spi-

Some others do not approve of my Notion about the Words justified in the Spirit; that we should understand them of the miraculous Works of the Spirit of God, which have confirmed this Truth, That Jesus Christ is God manifested in the Flesh; but I see not how a better Sense can be put upon them: The different Opinions of those who have labour'd hard to find out another, have fixed mine, and with me follow others that have proved it by St. Peter's Words, Acts 2. 22. Jefus of Nazareth, a Man approved of God among you by mighty Works. and Wonders, and Signs, which he did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves alfo know (a). Great is the Number of

They find Fault likewife with my comment upon 1 of Cor. 6. 3. Know ye not that we shall judge the Angels. And indeed I do not wonder at it, because most Interpreters understanding it other. wife : But the Truth is, that we are naturally Proud, and wonderful delighted with this Thought, that a Day will come, wherein we shall be appointed Judges of the Angels. But let me intreat the Reader to examine firicily the difficulties arifing from the common Opinion; as in the first Place, That Interpreters do not agree about feveral Heads. Some will have it That all the Elect of God shall Judge the Angels. Others that the Ministers only shall have this priviledge. Some fay that the Angels to be judged, are the wicked Angels only. 0thers will have the good ones to be no lefs Subject to this Judgment. Some do pretend to Judge even in this Life, others are con-

contented to wait till the last Day. Some do believe that they shall sit with Christ. upon the Bench. Others affirm, That they simply acquiesce to the Judgment given by Christ. Yea, that the Faithful shall only be brought in as Examples, which the supreme Judge shall produce against the condemned. Befides this, There are fome things which they have not minded, and which feem to me to be of no fmall difficulty. St. Paul's Argument is a Majori ad minus. If we are to Judge the Angels, how much rather things pertaining to this Life ? They fhould explain to us, what relation there is between these two forts of Judgment; and what confequence may follow from a Judgment that confifts only in Approbation, or given Evidence, or a Judgement that pronounces Sentence, and decides Matters: fuch as the Apostles would have the Faithful to give about the Difpute of their Brethren Furthermore, St. Paul grounds his Discourse upon this Supposition, That what he fpake was well known of all them that he spake to. faith he, that we shall judge the Angels? Let me, therefore ask these Doctors, who cannot determine what Judges fhall pronounce this Judgment, or what Angels shall be judged; When, and after what manner this Judgment shall. be given? and how God's Children can know that they shall be judged ? But, I get out of this Lybyrinth, by following the Sentiment of those St. Chryfostome fpeaks of upon this Place, and who believe, that the Angels meant, are the Ministers of the Church, who are to be judged by the Church it felf. Those Prophets, whole Spirits or Doctrines, are to be subject to the Prophets, who judge of what is faid ; and confequently do judge of Things greater and of an higher Importance than the Things of this Life. I shall mention no more Places of the holy, Scripture which are ill underftood by most, to find out their Witchcraft and Apparitions; Spirits working Wonders upon Bodies, and by the Means of strange Bodies, (whereby all the filly Stories of old Women and Children are afferted and maintained :) There being an excellent book written originally in Dutch, and most exactly Translated into French, in 4 Vols. whereof the first is already made English, and I hope and pray that God will raife fhortly fome learned and zealous Chriftian for the Truth, that may finish that necessary Work: The Title of it is, Le monde Enchante, and it contains weighty and unanswerable Answers, to what soever hath yet been Publish'd on this Subject.

But let me answer that which some will call a very material Objection, viz. That the Vulgar Opinion, being the more general and also own'd not to be damnable of it self, to what Purpose is is all this Stir about it? and why are these, new Notions fo zealoufly preffed and inculcated ? Yet I must fay, that this Notion is neither new nor inconfiderable among Men of Learning, and aiming at Perfection. And I prefume that what follows, will justify that it is not an indifferent thing, whether Christians be rightly informed in this Point or not. Observe therefore that in all things, and in the first Place he should have an Eye to the Glory of our God, which we cannot advance too much, nor remove too far, whatfoever is difhonorable to him; nor make the Way of Salvation too plain before Men. The Opinion commonly receiv'd concerning the Devil's Power and Dominion, of infpiring all the Evil that is done; tormenting Men and Women, yea and Children, who as yet have no Knowledge of Good and Evil, keeping in his Dependence, Legions of active and wicked Spirits always ready at his command, or able of themfelves to vex the Living, or even to raife up or represent the Dead, for the Terror ot

This, I declare I can never agree to; and I affirm, that the Belief of it is highly difhonourable to God, and ftumbling Block in the way of a Mens Salvation. This will be justified by Examples ; as, 10" -5.0

1. What are Inchantments and conjuring Words, which fuch Multitudes of Men do believe to have a Vertue of working fo many forts of wonderful Effects? Some do conceive a Vertue to be in the Words, and others in the Opperation of Satan, upon the pronouncing of them; for this we have the bold affertion of an eminent Author; "Experience teaches us, that "thefe

Too many more will fay the fame; fo that it is the Vulgar Notion, That this Vertue is in the Means. How abominable and criminal is this Opinion? The Centurian faid to our Saviour, Speak the Word, and thy Servant shall be healed Matt. 8. 9. thou canst make me clean. The fame is confirmed by Chrift himfelf, who stretch'd forth his hand and faid, I will, Be those clean: And are not Men ashamed to fay the fame of Satan as of Chrift; And yet this they do; and are not ashamed, far from it, they study Arguments and ftand to them, as if they were unanfwerable Proofs of their foolifh Notions: the Devil can do it, and more, if God permit him. A fubtil Way of Reafoning indeed ! which supposes that God may permit the Devil to be God, for he must be no less, and Almighty Creator likewife, if he doth all those Things that he is faid to do. And who can imagine that Satan being a vile and wicked Creature, fallen from God, and his greateft Enemy, should be permitted to do more and greater Things than ever he fuffer'd to be done by his best Servants? But this stands for nothing, they will go on and dispute still: For they fay, That God premits the Devil to work Miracles, tho' it be to conform a false Doctrine and seduce Men. For now they flick not to own that God can, and doth actually permit Satan to deceive Men, by working fuch Things, as is not possible for a Creature to do. Which Notion must necessarily afcribe a Divinity to the Devil; or make God the Author of Sin. If either Satan doth them of himfelf, or God doth work the fame by him: To this End they would have us to understand litterly that Place, Rev. 13. 11, 13. That the second Beast spake like the Dragon, and morketh great Signs and Wonders, even to make Fire to come down from Heaven, in the fight of Men, Deut. 13. Moses suppofes that a Sign or a Wonder may happen, which is defign'd only to tare away Men from the Worship of the true God. But in all this, no mention is made of the Devil; and furely the Wickedness of Man is sufficient to make him fall into Idolatry, yea and to draw others after him and feduce them by pretended Signs and Miracles. Every one is willing to make Profelytes, and zealous to bring over others to their O. 1 1 1 pinion.

pinion. Idolatrous Popery did conftanly produce fuch Miracles to the fame purpole: The Prophets fpoken of by Moses, were false Prophets, and Dreamers of Dreams, pretended to have feen and heard, and their Miracles were the fame pretended and false Miracles; and if any thing was done, yet nothing above Nature, the the Beholders comprehended it not.

2. I reckon this among inexcufable Absurdities, that Conjurers, Witches, or the Devil himself can do all that God permits them to do. Can Men in their Senses conclude, that a mere Permillion can enable for Action ? Chrift permitted St. Peter to walk upon the Sea, but enabled him not to do it; as he did to heal the impotent. Man at the beautiful Gate of the Temple. I ask therefore, whether it was fimple Permission that made Ba. laam's Afs to fpeak, and the Iron to fwim? Permiffion alone will never produce Things above Nature, nor work Miracles. And if Satan and his Imps do what . .

what is beyond their Nature, they must have the Power and Strength given them to do it, and that from God ; and fo God is the Doer of what is done: That if the Devil doth of himfelf what Men fay he doth above his Nature, he must be own'd to do greater Things than God ever did : Yet, oh Horror! there is nothing more common than Christians yea Protestants, to impute to Satan the working the fame Things or more : As for Example; was God the Ruler and Commander of the Air, when he caufed Thunder, Fire and Hail in the Land of Egypt? The Devil is thought to have had the fame Power, when the Houfes of Job's Children were overthrown; and now, that he hath whole Nations of Laplanders and Finlanders, who are able to raife, turn, and fell the Wind, and, by untying, a Knot made in the Corner of a Handkerchief, raife a Storm, and lay it again. And is it not now a common Saying, when confiderable Mifchief is done by a Storm, that fome Body is conjuring. One of our Saviour's greateff Juni D greatest and most admirable Work, is restoring the Dead to Life again, John 3. 10. by it he provd his Divinity and Almighty Power. As the Father raifes up the Dead and quickeneth them, so the Son quickeneth whom he will. But it is pretended that Satan goes farther, for Chrift raifed up the Dead, by reuniting the Soul with the fame Body; but according to the vulgar Opinion, the Devil can make Bodies for Spirits, which never had any Relation to a Body, and he can animate that which never had a Soul, yea transfrorm Men into Beafts. and bring them to themfelves again : He changes them and himfelf into Cats and Goats, and that not in Appearance only, but in Reality, for if the Cat be beaten, the Witch will have a Bruife; if the Hare be bitten by a Dog, and escapes, the Witch will go' laine the next Day. The Prophet, by the Power of God, caused the Iron to come up from the bottom to the top of the Water, 2 Kings 6. 6. But Satan makes a Multitude of Witches to fwim, where T. In I my other others would fink immediately. These are but few of innumerable Inftances that may be produc'd, to prove that Men do allow the Devil a Power and Operations above Nature; and if that is true, then he is a God. Every Creature is confined by God himfelf to the Properties of its own Nature, and fo are the Actions proceeding from these Properties: So that we must fay that when a Creature acts contrary to, or above its Nature, it is God's own Act, either by his own immediate Operation, as when St. Peter cured the impotent Man with one Word speaking, as he faid to the People, why do you look on us, as if by our own Power we had made this Man to walk? or by giving extraordinary Abilities to the Means, beyond their Nature, as after the troubling of the Water of Bethefda; and to the Waters of Jordan, to cure the Leprofy. As for my part, I will never enquire what the Devil can do, when I fee any thing done. that is above Nature; for then I am fure he cannot be the Doer of it : yet not not only old Women and Idiots among the Vulgar, but even learned and emipent Men will affirm the fame, and a great deal more inconfiftent, not only with the Principles of Christian Religion, but also contradictory to the Truth of the Creation, which hath fet fuch Bounds to all Creatures which they cannot pass; not only without God's Permission, but also without his giving them Power and Strength, beyond what he first imprinted in their Nature; and therefore what is faid of Spirits acting corporally upon Bodies, or of Bodies acting as Spirits, must either be false, or the Work of him, who is the Author of Nature, and is able to alter it when, and as he pleafeth: So the Opinion of any Creature having a Power of working Things above its Nature, cannot be maintained to the Glory of God.

Block unto Man, even in the Way of his Salvation : For, first of all, it furnifhes the Atheift with an unanswerable Argument against the Truth of our Holy Religion; for we pretend this to be undeniably establish'd by it, that the Writers of the Bible did those Things. which were impossible to be done without the Finger of God : This was the Cafe of the Law, Deut. 4. 42. God hath taken to himself a People, out of another People, by Temptations, by Wonders, by a strong Hand, and by an out-firetched Arm, and by great Terrors. It is the Cafe of the Golpel, Heb. 2. 4. God witnessing together with them by Signs, and Wonders, and mighty Works. But if what is conceived of the Devil takes Place, Conjurers and Witch. es go beyond Mofes and the Prophets, and Christ himfelf; for the Devil daily fets forth Prophecies, and doth Wonders beyond Urim and Thummim. this; but what faith the Spirit of Truth, Ifa, 41. 23. Make us to understand Things to come, and ye are Gods: But hidden Things, and Things to come, are difcover'd by the Devil's Revelation : If he is the God of this World, if he knows the Hearts, and can work upon them, and understand the Mysteries of Salvation, he hath divine Attributes, and he can do all Things; infpire David to go and number the People, and take from Job all his Goods, and the Health of his Body: But you will fay, that the Devil can do nothing but what God permits him to do. Have Care, I pray: Our Saviour faid that of himfelf, John 5. 19. I can do nothing of my/elf. Beware making Comparisons, which this new receiv'd Opinion is but too apt to do, to the great Scandal and Prejudice of the Christian Religion, and hinders Men from knowing and ferving God as they ought to do. St. James tells us, That if any lacketh Wisdom, he must beg it of God, who alone is able to give it. But this Opinion tells us, that Satan, out of his great - - 3 great Capacity, and long Experience can reveal all Things to Men. The Prophet Amos puts this Question, Is there any Evil in the City, and the Lord hath not done it ? But what answers this Conceit, All Evil is from the Devil. If we be affaulted with any fad or troublefome Thoughts, or feel in our Confciences fome Checks or Diffurbances for the Evil that we have done, we complain that we are purfued by an evil Spirit. And do we discourse of another World, we hear of nothing offner than the Devil's dragging and hauling Souls into Hell : So that however we are taught to honour and love God, we are also instructed to fear the Devil, contrary to the Scripture, which informs us, that God, and he alone, is to be fear'd; and that it is a fearful Thing to fall into the Hands of the Living God; not of a Devil in Chains. miniman, all is an all mini

And will not our pure and Holy Religion fuffer much, by thus making God the Author of these Errors and Cheats, Cheats, which are fet on work to feduce Men; for the Devil hath no Share in Omnipotence, and God must be the Doer of all those Things that exceed Nature, and yet are made Ufe of to turn away Men from God, to look upon Satan as the Engineer of these furprizing Things. Let our Hearts abhor fuch Conceits, for they will keep us from the right Sentiments we should have of the Divinity, and, by Consequence, make us incapable of rendering to our God that Honour, Reverence, and Service, which are due to him. As many as fancy that God either permits or gives the Devil a Power to do fuch Things, do ascribe to Satan a Power and Kingdom antecedent to, and as lafting as that of God's only Son; having under his Command and Direction Multitudes of Spirits, Men and Witches, who having contracted a strict Alliance with him, do affert his Dominion in all Parts of the World, to the great Grievance of innumerable Creatures, and the eternal Damnation of poor deluded Souls.

But to conclude, the Notions are inconfistent with the Practice of Piety, according as St. Paul marks their Opposition, 1 Tim. 4. 7. But reject ungodly and old Wives Fables, and exercise thy self unto Godliness : Here is a cafting out of the one, and admitting the other; not only preferring Piety before these Fables, but be fure to have nothing to do with these, and give thy felf wholly to the other; whereby it is fufficiently manifest, that such Fables can never agree with Piety. This is what St. Peter would have us to understand, when he faith, 2 Pet. 1. 16. We follow not after cunningly devised Fables, but we have made known unto you the Power and Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ among the Heathen : as now in Popery Religion was grounded upon Fables; all their Divinations, Ma. gick, and Conjurations were built upon that Foundation. And it was thus at Ephefus, when St. Paul writ this Epifile; that City being the Metropolis of all all the Heathenish Religions, by Reason of the Magnificence of Diana's Temple, and other Images fuppoled to come down from Heaven, all which was a mere Fable; the Priests of those false Divinities being accustomed to wrap up the Worship of their Gods and Dæmons with contriv'd Stories of their Extraction, Education, and Actions, and their Laws requir'd of Men their Worshippers, referving always to themfelves the Explication of these; and to confirm the People in the blind Service of these Gods, they pretended Apparitions, Revelations, and Miracles. The Jewish Talmud, the Turkish Alcoran, the Roman Legends, the Writings of our new Antitrinitarians, Socinians, and Antiscripturists, are to be avoided, with all Worfhippers of Tradition; for that is a new Herefy ftarted up of late among Protestants. These are Things that are made use of to feduce People, and make Gain of their Money, by feeding their Minds by fuch craftily invented Stories; fuch as the Apostle hath given a very proper Name to, στοσφισμέψειs μυθει, maliciously forged Fables: Of this Nature is all this Demonology, or Doctrine of Damons, fo much reverenc'd by the Heathen, profane and ridiculous Inventions entertain'd, and daily rehears'd among Children by old Women, whose weak Brains being filled with them, will not ceafe relating them to the younger Sort of People, as if they were undoubted Truths, eftablish'd by the most certain Experience : But the worft of all is, that for fuch Things old Women and others are often cast into Piisons, tormented, and doomed to the Flames, as convict-ed of Diabolical Magick. These are but few of those many Arguments that occur to justify that these vulgar Notions are inconfistent with the Practice of Piety, fince they fill up Mens Thoughts with Vanities, and make all their Devotion to be nothing but Superstition and Idolatry.

At this Time of Diltraction doubtlefs it was that Saul undertook to go to Endor; and it must be fo, for he went for Information to one of those, whom himself had banifhed out of the Land ; yea, whom he knew God had forbidden should be suffered to live. He was mad indeed to think that he could be difguifed from a Cunning Woman, who could not be ignorant of what every Body knew, that Saul was higher by the Head and Shoulders than any of the People. Distracted indeed he was! to imagaine to get true Information, when God refused to answer him; but a Spirit from the Lord tormented him; yet our Interpreters never thought to reckon him among the Possessed; because I suppose, it is faid that it was a Spirit from the Lord, not from Satan, 152.3

However, Saul was in a distracted Condition, for he was afraid at the Sight of the Philistine Army ; and fo in a proper Cafe to be put upon by fuch Pretenders to Devination, being throughly perfwaded of her great Skill in the Art of Magick. And accordingly, take Notice how the Woman acts her Part : He came to her in the Night, the proper Time for Deeds of Darknels, and none more dark than applying to the Dead for Relief; fuch was his Errand, I pray thee divine unto me by the Familiar Spirit, and bring me him up pohom I shall name unto thee; like that of Dives to Lazarus, Send one from the Dead to my Brethren, to testify unto them; and yet this is a Thing much to be taken Notice of, That of all those that were rais'd from the Dead, none is faid to have. have continued upon Earth, or to have done any thing, or to have given any Information. So that Saul's Request was both impertinent and impoffible, that Samuel, an holy Man, and now at reft from his Labours, should be disquieted to please the Curiosity of a mad, rebellious Prince, and the Covetoufnefs of a wicked and prefumptuous Woman; therefore the Woman faid unto him, and very prudently, to avoid the Penalty of the Law, Thou knomest what Saul bath done. He, to be fure of her, gives her the greatest Security that she could have, a folemn Oath of him to whom belongs the Execution of the Law; And Saul (ware to ber by the Lord, Saying, As the Lord lineth, there shall no Punishment happen unto thee for this Thing. Foolifhly thinking doubtlefs, as the vulgar Error prevail'd, that fhe could by her Art bring Samuel to talk with him about Business, as he us'd to do when he was alive : But, alas ! tempore mutantur, the Apparition must be to her, not to him, as will be manifest presently; how cometh this fudden Transition, without more Words, from his Request to the Apparition to her, Ver. 12. And when the Woman faw Samuel, she cry'd with a loud Voice ; but only because Saul, very Intent upon the Business, must be supposed to be in hafte, and the Woman immediately fteps into her Cell, or Clofet, where ftood the Ob, or Death's. tune-Tellers have thought fit to change into the casting of a Figure upon Paper, which no Body understands but themfelves, and the Conjuror alone must give the Signification thereof. When the Woman faw Samuel, for hitherto he faw nothing; and why not then, if he was to fee at all; no, there must be further juggling in the Cafe; the Woman was to fee, and he to bear only; therefore the goes to the proper Place appointed for Visions and Apparitions, into which Place the Client is not permitted to enter, out of which she starts, with wonted Amazement, for she cry'd with a loud Voice, and spake to Saul, saying, Why haft thou deceiv'd me? For thou art Saul. Now the King is fully perfwaded that the Woman had had the Vision, and that by it she had difcovered who he was, for DC.

he answered her, Be not afraid, for what farest thon? The Vision is over, and yet he faw nothing, and we will have him be very clearfighted, when he was ftark Blind; which he confesses by faying to her, What famest thou? And what Apparition was this? I saw (not thou) Gods ascending out of the Earth. A Vision indeed, of Plurality of Gods in a People which believed but one, and they ascending out of the Earth ! a Place where the very Gods of the Heathen were never faid to dwell. I would therefore entreat my Antagonists to give me the Meaning of those Words, which, I must confess I understand not : But as the dark Anfwers of our Aftrologers, and of the ancient Oracles, which were never delivered but in Enigmatical Terms; but of these the poor Prince had no fight; for he faid to her, her, What Form is he of ? Surely he faw nothing yet, for she faid, An old Man cometh up, and he is covered with a Mantle. Then Saul perceived, he did not fee that it was Samuel, but he perceived, he conje-Etured and concluded it from the Words of the Woman; as all those that will have their Fortune told them, must be fatisfied with what the Teller will reveal in the Matter; but he bow'd and knealt, either with Thanks to the Woman, or in Reverence to the Memory of Samuel, who vouchfaf'd to appear in his Behalf, and (by her) to gracioufly to answer his Request ; for why fo many Words in framing this Apparition to the Woman, so many Words, affirming that Saul faw nothing, and yet not the least Item of his appearing to Saul himfelf; but the Dialogue, continuing Hill ftill betwixt Saul and the Woman, she personates Samuel none otherwife than the Advocate personates his Client when he pleads for him, Then said Samuel to Saul, (tho' Saul fought the Mediation of the Woman, it was not from her that he expected his Instruction, but from the Apparition of Samuel; neither did the Woman pretend to inform him of herfelf, before Samuel appeared; and then the things to be spoken of, relating particularly to Saul and Samuel, more than to the Woman, who was but a Mediatrix, it was proper for her then to personate Samuel, whom Saul could not fee, and to name Things that pertained to them, and not at all to herfelf, as the following Words do fhew ; Why haft thou disquieted me ? Samuel, if any, not the Woman, was disquieted. And there-therefore as the Lawyer takes up? on him to perfonate his Client, because he is the Party concerned; fo this Woman doth the fame here; to utter the Words which were proper for Samuel to have uttered, if he had really appeared; and they are true Words in themselves, for it must have been a great Disturb. ance to holy. Samuel, to be fetch'd from Heaven, or from the Grave, to pleafure a wicked King and a curfed Woman. But the Words must be false, if the Apparition was true, for Samuel could not be difquieted in going upon God's Errand, as this must be; for God's Permission, so often alledg'd in this Cafe, is not fufficient; it cannot make the Devil a God, to create, to raise up the Dead, to Inspire, to Transform, to make a Woman a Hare, and an Elephant of a Bee's Knee. · 2:

Knee. Have a care, Mortal Men, of fuch furprizing Incongruities, yea Impossibilities to Nature, and blafphemously put upon God himself, making him the Author of what he utterly abhorrs and abfolutely forbids. Observe what Saul anfwers to this Reproof (pray excufe me, I could not help it,) I am fore distressed, the Philistines make War against me, and God is departed. from me, and answereth me no more; God himself must be taxed, and made the Caufe of our Extravagan. cies. As we run to Churches to thank him for the Success of the enormous Crimes that we commit, fo pray hear this Lesson, ye careless Men; Then said Samuel, wherefore then dost thou ask of me, seeing the Lord is departed from thee, and is become thine Enemy? Ye that are but fallible Men, have a care of find-finding Fault with God; if God will not, the whole Creation cannot relieve you; you particularly, that are so much for Witches and Apparitions, fee the Impossibility of them, for God is not there; If ye do Evil, i. e. if you go about an unlawful thing, God leaves you, and no Good will come of it; and if any Succels appears, it is the worfe for you, as it was for Saul, Confusion and utter Destruction : After the Declaration of which, in the 17th, 18th and 19th Verfes, the Effect follows, Ver. 20. Then Saul fell fraitway all along upon the Earth, and was fore afraid, becaufe of the Words of Samuel; and there was no Strength in him, because he had eaten no Bread all the Day, nor all the Night; fo great was his Distraction, that he minded nothing but his wicked Defign. The Conclusion clusion of all this is in the 19th Verse; Moreover the Lord will also deliver Israel with thee, into the hands of the Philistines; and to Morrow Shalt thou and thy Sons be with me : and the Lord alfo shall deliver the Hoft of Israel into the Hands of the Philistines : which shews how much God is provoked, when he permits a wicked King to rule over a People, the whole Nation fuffers by it. The End is, the Saul is left to the Woman's Care to Succour him; but the laft Words are not eafily understood, To Morrow thou shalt be with me; that they were meant of his Death, all do own; but the Words to Morrow, and with me, feems to have fomething of the former juggling, the Gods a scending out of the Earth; for we have noted, that Saul did not die the next Day after his being at Endor; and the Hiltos 2

Hiftory of Saul's Life will hardly permit us to understand Heaven, where we faithully believe that Samuel was, nor yet Ramath, where he was buried, and from whence we hold it impossible for all Witches, and even the Devil himself to remove any Body ; and God himself never did, but by a great Miracle, and for the Confirmation of that Christian Article of Faith, the Refurrection of the Dead, and particularly to bear Testimony of our blessed Saviour's Refurrection.

As to the great Miracle which our Saviour wrought upon the Two, St. Mark faith One Demonaick, becaule perhaps one appear'd to Chrift before the other, or becaule there was fomething more remarkable in the Madnels of the one than that of the other; as is conftantly ob-observed, that among a Multitude afflicted with the fame Disease, every one hath some Symptom diftinct from the others, and in no Distemper so much to be taken Notice of, as in the Epilepsy and Lunacy, which the Heathen never fail'd to ascribe to the working of some Dæmon or other; as the Roman Catholicks do to their Saints, whom they have translated into Dæmons by their Canonization, and to whom they prefently apply for cure; as for Example, (and to name no more) to the Bleffed Virgin Mary, in Cafe of Child-birth, for they have made her an universal Midwife. But to return to the Hiftory; I declare my Sentiment, that all the Errors in this Cafe might have been prevented, if Translators had been careful at the first not to confound the Word Demon and that of Devil

Devil together, and had well informed Chriftians of their Difference. Did Men know and believe thefe Things, (which nothing but strong Prevention and Negligence keeps them from knowing) 1. That Demon is a good Word, where-ever it is used for a God, rather than a Devil. 2. That Demons were imagined by the Heathen to be dead Men, who having deferved well, were arriv'd to another State of Glory and Honour, and to a Capacity of working extraordinary Things; that therefore fome Reverence and Worship is due to them from Mortals. This the holy Scripture declares, and all Chriftians-ought to believe to be nothing at all but Delusion, readily receiv'd and cunningly made use of by vile and ungodly Men, for fecular Ends. 3. That the Heathen and Roman Det

Roman Catholicks did, and do to this Day, ascribe to their supposed deified Men, the Miracles, and all extraordinary Events, which indeed are, or feem to be, above Nature ; and thence arifes the Superflition and idolatrous Worship that is render'd to Creatures. 4. Did Christians believe and profess that which they cannot but know, that we know nothing of the Devil, but what the Book of God tells us; that the Old Testament faith nothing of him, but under the Names of the Serpent and of Satan; that the New Teftament never speaks of him, but in the fingular Number, that therefore we are to believe that there is but One Serpent, One Satan, One Devil; that what foever this Devil is, whatfoever Wit or Power he may have, or have had, the Seed of the Woman, which is Christ, hath broken his Head; That the Devil is in Chains, and fo is a very infignificant Fellow, far from that universal Monarchy of this World, having at his Command Legions of what, I know not how to call them, that he fends up and down to tempt, tire and torment Men upon the whole Earth: Whereas, as to Temptation, St. James tells us, Chap. 1. Ver. 14. That every Man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own Luft, and enticed : Let the Courts of Judicature put out of their Indictments, that the Malefactor did kill or rob a Man by the Instigation of the Devil; for the Devil was not there, nor knew nothing of the Matter. Therefore, O Christians, look to your felves, and make your Peace with God, for He alone is to be fear'd ! He fees and knows, and he alone will judge and punish! If HE be for you, it matters not who is against you! As to all the Changes and Chances of this World, St. John instructs us very well; to all Intents and Purpofes, i John 2. 16. he tells us of the Things that can bring any Mischief on us, and all the Enemies we are to beware of, and fight with, viz. The Luft of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life. These are all the Devils we are to encounter withal, and which if we conquer and defeat, we are fafe. Lastly, If Men did believe, profess and practice this, That to fear God and keep his Commandments is the Whole Duty of Man, that in the Difcharge of this Duty, we shall meet with all the Instruction we have need of, and all the Bleffings that will make us happy, both here and hereafter; then we fhall . · · · · · · shall fear no Devils to disturb, seek to no Witches or Apparations of dead Men or Angels to inform us; for our good God hath last of all fpoken to us by his Son. One thing therefore I add, and with it conclude this fhort APPENDIX, and earnestly pray to our merciful God, that he would be pleafed to move powerfully the Heart of his his Servants, and particularly all Clergymen, to read over and over again, and reflect ferioufly upon what St. Luke faith, Chap. 7. 21, 22. And in that same Hour he cured many of their Infirmities and Plagues, and of Evil Spirits; and unto many that were Blind, he gave Sight. Then Jesus answering, said unto them, Go your Way, and tell John what Things ye have feen and heard ; how that the Blind see, the Lame walk, the Lepers are cleansed, the Deaf hear, bear, the Dead are raised; to the Poor the Gospel is preached. Here is diligently to be noted, that St. John's Disciples faw Jesus casting out Evil Spirits, and that they were to tell John all the Things they had feen and heard, and that is all that was to be told; for hear a notable Exception, both in St. Matthew and in St. Luke, they were not to fpeak of the cafting out of Dæmons, for doubtless our Saviour's Omiffion in the Charge that he gave them, was a Prohibition: And why was not the caffing out of Dæmons a Miracle, for it is named among them; or is it à leffer Miracle than making the Lame to walk, or the Deaf to hear? Nothing of this, but there is a Reafon for it that few Men give Attention unto. The Question was, how to make it plain to John and Z 2 the the whole World, and first to the Jews, that Jesus was the Christ, the Meffiah promised unto Israel; to do this, one thing was necessary and sufficient, viz. to prove that Jefus was he that was promifed of God by the Covenant of Grace, defcribed by the Prophets, and the Works that he should do fo plainly marked, that they being well confidered, it was impossible not to know him; therefore our Savigur tells them very often to be mindful of his Works, which teftified of him ; and of his doing the Works which his Father fent him to do, and which the Prophet had faid he should do. So that the Prophets having faid nothing, and our Saviour himself saying nothing of casting out Dæmons in this Place, where it should have been faid, had it been one of the Works necele neceffary to prove him to be the Messiah; but it is necessary that he should to that purpose cure all manner of Difeafes among Men, both great and fmall, both ordinat ry and extraordinary Fevers and Agues, Lunacy and Madnefs : For, if Christians would but consider 2: well, an Ague hath as many billing fing Things and Difficulties, as the possessing Spirits ever had, and those that made the Fever a Divindo. were as much in the right, is they who maintain that the Demonaicks which our Saviour cure were acted by foreign Spirits that had entered into them. And if the Difficulty of their paffing into the Herd of Swine cannot be answer'd by comparing it with Naaman's Leprofy paffing into Gehazi's Family, I must stay where I am till they bring me Word what became of the De-Vila

Foralmuch as the main Argument which they have to prove their Witches and Apparitions, are the Stories they tell of them, whereof the greatest part are fufficiently refuted by the Relation : If God were pleased to give me Time and Health, I would endeavour to pay them in their own Coin, and prove by Stories within mine own Reach, how much the cunning and wicked Part of the World imposes upon the credulous and ignorant.
